U.S. Jet Downs Red MIG

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Navy fighter-bomber escorting a reconnaissance plane shot down a MIG21 over North Vietnam Saturday, the U.S. Command announced today. It was the first kill claimed by the Americans over the North since the bombing halt 17 months ago.

A spokesman said he did not know if the MIG pilot died at the Navy F4 Phantom jet and the unnamed RF4C Phantom photographic plane as they flew over Thanh Hoa province, 125 miles north of the Demilitarized Zone.

But he called the North Vietnamese plane an "attacking" aircraft, adding: "Undoubtedly it was in some sort of maneuver indicating that it was attacking the reconnaissance aircraft."

It was the 11th North Vietnamese plane claimed by U.S. aircraft, the spokesman said, but the first since Sept. 19, 1968, six weeks before President Johnson halted the bombing of North Vietnam. Despite the bombing halt, U.S. planes have continued to fly reconnaissance missions over North Vietnam regularly, accompanied by fighter-bomber escorts. Several have been shot down.

There was no American comment on a North Vietnamese claim that a Phantom reconnaissance plane was shot down by North Vietnamese gunners Sunday over Quang Binh province, just north of the Demilitarized Zone. The North Vietnamese report did not say what happened to the plane's two crewmen.

In the ground fighting, government units in the western Mekong Delta were credited with killing at least 33 North Vietnamese regulars Monday in the Seven Mountains area after rangers and armored units were shifted south to reinforce them.

JAN SARGENT, 18-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Sargent of 999 North Kingshighway, April calendar girl, is a Girl Scout, Red Pepper and musician. She is 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds... brown hair and hazel green eyes. Miss Sargent is a senior at Sikeston high school and a Miss Sikeston finalist.

Calendar Girl Outdoors

Year round outdoor activities, many including Adam, her six-month-old German shepherd puppy, fill the life of Jan Sargent, April calendar girl.

Miss Sargent daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Sargent, says: "I've been in Scouts since I was a Brownie, and believe it is a good organization," referring to Girl Scouts.

"It gives you some standards to live by and some fun things to do, nationwide opportunities like the canoe trip I took last summer," she continued. "We started out in Minnesota and went into national park territory and into Canada a little bit. We spent six days and nights canoeing, camping where we could find a place. It was very primitive."

Miss Sargent is active in choir work, Red Peppers and band at Sikeston high school where she is a senior. She plans to major in music in college, but has not made a final decision as to what school she will attend.

Her goal is a master's degree in music therapy, a new field, which will qualify her to work as a therapist with mentally retarded children.

The Miss Sikeston contest last fall was fun, said Miss Sargent, and the calendar girl work is fun, too. But, she would not want to make modeling a career.

About military activity, Miss Sargent says she feels the United States should not get involved in Laos. This is the wrong way to solve the situation.

"I don't know the solution," she said, "but we have too many problems here" -- like population -- to become involved somewhere else and not even solve Vietnam first.

"People should write to their congressmen and even the President, and say what they feel. They do listen to their constituents," and read the letters. It has to be effective."

Miss Sargent is anxious to save the natural beauty of the United States so more people can enjoy outdoor activities.

Classes resumed today at 12 public schools following ratification of an agreement between negotiators of the Community Teachers Association and the school board.

The agreement, reached last Friday night, calls for minimum pay hikes to starting teachers of $100 for 1970-71.

If additional state aid is forthcoming through provisions of the proposed state income tax revision, the starting pay will be boosted $450 from the current level of $5,700.

Classes were suspended in public schools three days last week after members of the CTA set up pickets Tuesday. The agreement reached on pay calls for the teachers to make up the classroom days missed.

News Briefs New Quake Takes More Lives

GEDIZ, Turkey (AP) — A sharp new earthquake struck this devastated region of western Turkey today, killing at least 24 more persons and causing more damage in several villages.

The new tremor shook Gediz, where rescue workers still were digging out the victims of an earthquake last Saturday which took an estimated 1,300 lives.

Villages around the half-flattened town were hard hit by the new shock this morning.

"The figure of 24 dead in the new tremor is only preliminary," said a relief official.

Pavilion Closing Confirmed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Spanish international pavilion, "Jewel of the New York World's Fair," in 1964-65 and later moved to St. Louis, will close April 19 because of financial troubles.

Mayor A. J. Cervantes, who solicited private funds to move the pavilion and reassemble it in St. Louis, announced the closing after a 90-minute meeting with the Board of Directors.

Visitors trade to the tourist attraction was over estimated and construction costs under estimated, officials said recently.

The two-story building will be taken over by the Carondelet Savings and Loan Association of St. Louis, which holds a $25 million mortgage note on the building.

A spokesman for Carondelet said the firm might try to keep the pavilion going as a "showcase for St. Louis, not Spain."

Health Program Ending Because of Lack of Funds

A cutback in funds is bringing about the abolishment of the Scott County Health Center's home health agency program, Dr. Thelma C. Buckthorpe, administrator, announced today.

The program was designed primarily to provide an intensive type of nursing care for home bound patients with long-term illnesses to allow the disabled to maintain his independence in his own environment as long as possible. About 30 persons were receiving the service.

Dr. Buckthorpe said some chronically ill patients will continue to be served.

Requirements for a patient to have been eligible for the program were doctor's reference, Medicare insurance, home confined and hospitalized at least three days. Persons who needed the service but had not been in the hospital prior to the program had benefits from Medicare insurance that paid 80 per cent of the costs of nursing visits after $50 had been paid by the patient. The patients were billed for the remaining 20 per cent of the visits.

The problem, Dr. Buckthorpe said, arose when Medicare funds were not received to pay for skilled nursing care. Dr. Buckthorpe said her agency does not have money necessary to continue the program. Other factors that brought about discontinuance of the program, Dr. Buckthorpe said, are shortages of funds discovered in the county collector's office, people who paid county taxes under protest and less state funds.

The lack of funds, she said, required termination of the services of a nurse, a nurses aid and a secretary.

"This simply does not leave us enough personnel to carry on the program," Dr. Buckthorpe said. Dr. Buckthorpe said no payment will be made by the medicare program for home health services furnished to patients whose plan of treatment is established on or after Wednesday. For patients whose plan of treatment is established before Wednesday, no payment will be made for services furnished after Dec. 31, 1970.

She said the agreement between the secretary of health, education and welfare and the Scott county agency will be terminated in accordance with the Social Security Act.

Bluff Police Resignations Accepted

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Resignations tendered March 10 by the city's 22 uniformed policemen were accepted today by city manager David Pence, who said he would begin immediately taking applications for replacements.

The resignations, submitted by all members of the force except for the police chief, two radio dispatchers and clerical workers, were to have been effective April 1.

Pence met, however, with the 22 and gave them the rest of today off. He said they would be eligible to reapply for their positions at no loss of seniority or rank until 5 p.m.

Police submitted demands for $150 a month pay raise and increased fringe benefits March 1 and later submitted their resignations.

Pence said he would submit to the city council a proposal that starting pay for policemen be hiked from $4,041 annually to $4,200.

The pay, he said, would go to $4,500 after three months, to $4,800 after one year and $5,100 after five years.

South Korean Bid to Fool Airliner Hijackers Fails

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — A Japanese jetliner hijacked by leftist students with short samurai swords and dynamite landed today at a South Korean airport disguised to look like one in North Korea. But the ruse failed and the 15 hijackers demanded to be flown north.

They insisted that all 100 other persons on the plane, including two Americans, go along with them.

The crew of the Japan Airlines plane awaited daybreak Wednesday to depart.

The plane was down at Seoul's Kimpo International Airport for four hours before the hijackers apparently decided the landing at Seoul was a trick. The pilot then asked the control tower to let him take off.

"We want to land some 120 miles north of here," he said, apparently meaning at Pyongyang, the North Korean Capital and the Destination the hijackers had demanded.

Sources at the airport said the local manager of Japan Air Lines sent the hijackers a note telling them the pilot could take them to Pyongyang but they should allow the other 95 or more passengers and crewmen to get off in Seoul. The sources said there was no immediate response from the hijackers.

The South Koreans had rigged up signs to make the airport appear to be Pyongyang's and tried other devices to convince the hijackers they were in the Communist North, but the ruses failed.

Learning from the pilot's call shortly before 7 p.m. that the hijackers had failed, the authorities hurriedly taken down. Fake welcoming signs were put up. Korean troops who had been standing guard near the plane in North Korean uniforms.

It was not known, however, whether the plane could make a safe flight to North Korea, particularly at night.

Yasuhiro Nakasone, director general of Japan's Self Defense Force, said the plane had entered North Korean air space after leaving Fukuoka but was refused permission to land in Pyongyang. He said he had received information that North Korean anti-aircraft guns fired near the airliner and that North Korean MIG21 jet fighters approached it.

The plane then flew to Seoul with six South Korean F5 jet fighters flying escort, Nakasone said.

Among the passengers aboard were two Americans: Herbert Brill of Pepsi-Cola Japan and Father Daniel S. MacDonald, a Maryknoll priest from San Francisco. All the rest were Japanese.

Branding short samurai swords, about 15 youths took over the Japan Air Lines Boeing 727 this morning shortly after it left Tokyo for Fukuoka, on the southwest coast of Japan.

The hijackers said they were members of the revolutionary Red Army student faction and told the pilot to head for North Korea. Instead he landed at Fukuoka, ostensibly for fuel.

It was Japan's first plane hijacking.

Duffy Sentenced To Six-Month Term

LONG BINH, Vietnam (AP) — A military court sentenced a young U.S. Army officer today to six months' confinement and a $1,500 fine for the death of a Vietnamese prisoner of war. Two days ago he faced life imprisonment.

First Lt. James B. Duffy, 23, of Claremont, Calif., was found guilty Sunday of premeditated murder, but the eight-man court voted to reconsider its verdict when it found out the murder conviction carried a mandatory life sentence.

On Monday the court convicted Duffy of two lesser counts: involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy to commit manslaughter.

Banon Unruly Defendants Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court upheld today the right of trial judges to remove disorderly, disruptive and disrespectful defendants from the courtroom.

"It is essential to the proper administration of criminal justice that dignity, order and decorum be the hallmarks of all court proceedings in our country," said Justice Hugo L. Black.

"The flagrant disregard in the courtroom of elementary standards of proper conduct should not and cannot be tolerated."

Therefore, the high court said through Black, there are at least three constitutionally permissible ways for a trial judge to handle an obstreperous defendant. He can be bound and gagged, but allowed to remain in the courtroom; he can be cited for contempt; or he can be taken out of the courtroom until he promises to conduct himself properly.

The ruling was unanimous. Separate concurring opinions were filed by Justices William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan Jr.

The decision is of major significance in light of a recent wave of disruptive trials.

The recent highly publicized trial of eight persons accused of conspiring to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago was disrupted repeatedly. At its end, all the remaining defendants were sentenced for contempt of court by Judge Julius G. Hoffman.

One of the original defendants, Bobby G. Seal, was bound and gagged for a time before a mistrial was declared in his case.

Cotton Exports May Dip Lowest Since WWII

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cotton exports may dip this year to the lowest level since World War II, Agriculture Department analysts say.

But surplus supplies are expected to be the smallest since 1963, the analysts add.

The 1969-70 export total was estimated in a cotton situation summary at about 2,062,000 bales or approximately one-fourth less than last season.

In January the department estimated cotton exports for the marketing year ending July 31 at about 2.5 million bales. Increased world supplies and a relentless competition from manmade fibers were cited as reasons for the reduction.

Total use, including domestic consumption and exports, was projected at near 10.75 million bales, slightly less than last year. But the projected total is more than the 1969 U.S. crop, and thus will cut more deeply into the stockpile, now estimated at about six million bales by July 31, the smallest reserve since 1963, according to department records.

HATE MAKES WASTE

Hate drains time and energy, and gets no one anywhere.

If all the time Americans now spend hating each other was spent instead on working to improve whatever it is they dislike, there soon wouldn't be much of anything left to hate.

Since hatred hasn't resulted in anything except destruction, hurting everyone, might this constructive method be worth trying, for a change?

FLAG FLAP

Last fall, as her contribution to the Viet Nam moratorium, a 26-year-old mother of two decided to fly the American flag upside down from her porch in Wantagh, Long Island. For this method of dissent, Mrs. Elizabeth Hubner was arrested, searched, handcuffed, fingerprinted, and denied bail by a bondsman before being released on a charge of violating state criminal law. The New York statute prohibits showing "contempt, either by word or act, upon the flag."

Mrs. Hubner has been ordered to appear for trial on Tuesday, March 17, in the First District Court at Mineola, L.I. If convicted, she faces a possible sentence of one year and/or a $1,000 fine. As a high school girl a decade ago, Mrs. Hubner won the American Legion's good-citizenship award.

Since the November incident, the N.Y. State Court of Appeals has ruled, 5-2, that the right of free speech does not permit the use of the American flag in "dishonorable" ways as a form of protest. It upheld the conviction of a New York art dealer who displayed art in which the American flag was wrapped around a phallic symbol. In addition to state statutes, there is federal law signed by President Johnson in 1968 that makes it a federal crime to burn or desecrate the flag.

Smith Hempstone of the Washington Star wrote (Feb. 25) that "the wholly contemptible abuse of the American flag by the New Left" had encouraged "the established tendency of the right wing to appropriate the national flag and all its symbolism as its exclusive property." Manifestations of reaction against the New Left include the widespread use of flag decals and the sewing or affixing of miniature American flags onto police uniforms, a practice endorsed by President Nixon and followed by more than 1,000 of the nation's 18,300 police departments Old Glorys being used by all sides to bring about still more political polarization in an already divided nation.

MOTHER BELL'S BUSY SIGNAL

A "regrouping" of American Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s top executive structure will take place on Wednesday (April 1). In the most important change H. I. Romnes, now chairman and chief executive officer, will take on the additional title of president, succeeding Ben S. Gilmer.

An old song, from World War I, "Hello Central, Give Me No Man's Land," suddenly seems up-to-date again. Today, though, it isn't always necessary to call Central. The phone user sometimes is plugged into no man's land even when he dials the house or the apartment next door. Telephone service in the United States has joined the growing list of things that don't work as well as they did in the good old days.

Deterioration of telephone service was felt first in New York City, and has since spread to other metropolitan areas. A prime problem area is Wall Street, where the demand for telephone service was underestimated because brokerage firms failed to predict the late-1960s upsurge in trading volume. Another unexpected increase in telephone traffic occurred when the city government decided that welfare recipients were entitled to have city-paid telephone service.

Surveying the disastrous state of New York City telephone communications last year, Business Week stated: "The current chaos is so vast that it cannot be patched over or swept under the rug." The magazine added that "the blame seems to lie squarely in the lap of New York Telephone Co. and its parent, AT & T."

The problems of the Bell System could grow worse. With Picturephone service due to begin this year on a limited basis AT&T faces the task of virtually rewiring the entire country in the next decade. Moreover, the company not only must go to the financial community and the public for the tens of billions of dollars it needs for expansion but it also must push through dozens of unpopular rate increases simply to keep abreast of increases in wages and materials costs.

The quest for money already has begun. AT & T will call on its immense stockholding family next month to help raise a record $3.1 billion for expansion needs. The company's directors last Jan. 21 approved a plan to offer shareholders $1.57 billion principal amount of 30-year debentures, accompanied by warrants to buy 31.4 million shares of AT&T stock.

On the very day that AT&T announced its mammoth financing venture, the New York Telephone Co.'s president in charge of operations stated that phone service in and around the city was worse than it ever had been. "We're giving lousy service, and I know it's lousy," William G. Sharwell said. Little more than a month later, the New York Public Service Commission authorized New York Telephone to impose an interim rate increase of 8.5 per cent on residential telephones.

Many of the difficulties faced by New York Telephone and other AT&T affiliates are outside their control. Pay telephones in big cities are increasingly vandalized and looted. Fearful of crime, many persons call friends instead of visiting them, with the result that the average phone conversation is 20 per cent longer today than a few years ago. New York Telephone's uncollected bills average no less than $1.5 million a month.

Furthermore, the company is an enlightened employer. More than 18,000 of its 57,000 New York City workers are blacks and Puerto Ricans. As a result, New York magazine has pointed out, phone users in the metropolis "are getting closely and personally acquainted with the essence of the ghetto—its style, speech, manners, education and temper." The experience has been an uncomfortable one to date for both operator and telephone user. And New York Telephone, instead of being applauded for good intentions, is reviled even more for erratic service.

The Colonel said: "It is a good woman's notion that every woman whose idea of great happiness is not to have babies to put to bed every night, should be investigated."

An unconfirmed rumor rarely lasts much longer than 48 hours.

Trouble seems to do people good. The oldest looking woman in Sikeston at one time had never had any trouble, while the youngest looking woman in town of her age had had children, a mean husband and other kinds of trouble.

NEW YORK (AP) — The ability to say no is one of the keys to a safe life, as well as a long and happy one.

The wise person learns early that he must pick and choose as to what he does and whose he goes. If he does everything everybody asks him to, he is certain to wind up behind the 8-ball or missing from the scene altogether.

Here, for example, are some invitations that usually lead only to trouble, embarrassment, or disaster:

"Why don't we have our picnic here? The odds are only about one in 20 that those vines are poison ivy."

"You've never heard Beethoven's 'Moonlight Sonata' blown on a trumpet? Would you like to have my son play it for you?"

"Go ahead and call his bluff. He probably only has a lousy pair of dukes."

"No, it's not exactly tobacco. But roll some into a cigarette, and I'll tell you later what it is. After all, you do trust me, don't you?"

"How about trying this new wonder drug my doctor prescribed for me? I does cause some people to break out with the hives, but that's fairly rare."

"Suppose you park here. I know it's in a no-parking zone, but surely the cops won't haul away your car if we're only in the store for 10 minutes."

"If you back out now, aren't you afraid everyone will call you chicken?"

"You've seen how pretty my gal is. Well, her cousin is in town this week. How about the four of us going out on the town tomorrow night?"

"Would you care to know what I'd do about Vietnam if I were in the White House?"

"I'm afraid I made your martini a bit weak. Shall I put in another cup of gin?"

"For a guy who was never on a pair of skis until two weeks ago, you're doing famously. Want to try this slope? It's supposed to be toughest this side of Sun Valley."

"These marshmallow pancakes are made from a secret recipe in my wife's family. She'll think you don't like her cooking unless you eat at least half a dozen."

"If he invites you to step outside and settle it, go ahead. I'll be right behind you."

"Double or nothing?"

"It's only 175 yards or less across the lake. Why don't you make a sport and show you can make it with a No. 5 iron?"

"Why don't you just buy it now and pay later?"

The Missouri State Highway Patrol made a total of 145,520 arrests in 1969. This was an increase of 12 per cent over the number of arrests made in 1968. Nearly 95 per cent of these arrests were classified as "traffic" or motor vehicle associated arrests. The remaining arrests were in the criminal misdemeanor and felony category.

There were 137,684 motor vehicle arrests of which 88,095 were for hazardous moving traffic violations. This was an increase of 10.7 per cent over the number of those hazardous moving violation arrests made during the previous year. Among the offenses included in this category are those relating to careless and imprudent driving and driving while intoxicated.

Those arrests made by the Patrol last year for moving violations involving drinking numbered 4,549. The number of these driving while intoxicated arrests classified as motor vehicle misdemeanor totaled 4,474. There were also 75 driving while intoxicated felony arrests made by the Patrol under Missouri Statutes the first two convictions for driving while intoxicated are misdemeanors, but the third and subsequent offenses are felonies.

The Patrol's Commercial Motor Vehicle Enforcement Division weighed 1,323,690 commercial vehicles last year. The Division made 25,213 arrests and issued 116,038 written warnings.

H.L. Hunt Says

Those who believe that the individual should be allowed to guide his own life so long as he does not violate the rights of others may well be disturbed by the President's proposal for a so-called "blue ribbon" commission to formulate a "national growth policy" for the United States.

When asked what the policy would cover, the President answered: "It will include everything from population goals to the control of the environment." The President stated that by "environments" he meant pollution, conservation, education, health, and the well-being of our citizens.

The list leaves few areas of life uncovered by the "national growth policy." If, in fact, the government decides to formulate a policy for the "well-being" of all citizens, there is no aspect of human life which it could not bring under that heading.

The kind of policies likely to be formulated by the commission are obvious from the names mentioned as possible chairmen: John Gardner, former Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Kingman Brewster, President of Yale University. Both of these men advocate statist policies and centralized government.

It is deeply disturbing that such a proposal could be seriously made in a country which has always respected the rights of the individual. Totalitarian governments seek to control absolutely the lives of their subjects, but this kind of control has no place in a free country. HLH.

The Daily Standard Dear Editor, A bit of friendly (constructive criticism).

Looks like the administration has gone too far in its attempt to control the price of corn and wheat and the price of flour and meal.

Hospital Secretary Hooked on Drugs....Help!

Dear Ann Landers: I do secretarial work in a large hospital. I've become addicted to drugs which I obtain through the hospital pharmacist with whom I've been having an affair. I am beginning to have severe guilt feelings. The man is married and has four small children. When I met his wife a few weeks ago I felt like killing myself.

I want to end the affair but he says if I stop seeing him he will no longer supply me with drugs. I've been on the junk for eight months and can't live without it. If I had to buy it I'd be broke. My habit runs about $30 a day.

I need some advice fast. — Hooked Hazel.

Dear Hazel: You need more than my advice, Lady. You need to see a doctor and get off the junk. It is not essential that you divulge the source of your supply. Get going before you break out.

Dear Ann Landers: It's a good thing for me there's an Ann Landers. My parents spoiled me rotten. They let me do anything and everything. They let me go anywhere with anybody. Any kind who thinks a life like that is fun is crazy. I practically raised myself. The only advice or guidelines I ever got were from you.

You wrote something a while back that I consider a masterpiece. Please repeat it in case some parents missed it. I tore it out and here it is:

Parents do their kids no favor when they let their children run wild. Children need to have limits set. It gives them a feeling of security. I feel sorry for youngsters who can do as they please. They feel, deep down, that nobody loves them enough to insist they behave. Discipline is a special kind of love. Kids need it and they want it. — Thanks For Everything

Dear T.F.E.: You've made my day. Thanks for writing. Dear Ann Landers: Frequently you advise the mistreated wife — especially the wife of an alcoholic — to "throw the bum out." It's not that easy. I was married to a drunk who stole money from my purse, sold our household appliances and got into fights — one fight cost $200 for the other fellow's new teeth. He slapped me around, being careful not to land any blows which might leave evidence of assault and battery. I called the police on four occasions. The bum sat down quietly when the police arrived. To all the world he appeared to be a saint. Because I was wrought up they figured I was nuts. The police offered to stay while I packed to leave, but said they hadn't witnessed any violence and couldn't order a man out of his own house. The moment the police left he started to slap me around again. When I finally decided to get a divorce I was the one who moved out. So please stop telling women to "throw the bum out." The bum doesn't have to go if he doesn't want to. — The One Who Went.

Dear One: You are right, but most drunks who beat up their wives aren't as careful as your husband. They bloody noses, break jaws and blacken eyes. When the police arrive it is obvious the women didn't walk into a cupboard.

You solved the problem by moving out but most wives whose husbands become physically abusive can throw the bum out.

Do you feel ill at ease... out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Road to Milwaukee Getting Longer

Associated Press Sports Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The American League was faced with an intriguing section of its own constitution and the disquieting threat of antitrust legislation Monday as the winding judicial road from Seattle to Milwaukee suddenly seemed just a little longer.

The road the Seattle Pilots hoped to tread to Milwaukee was studied with legal rocks throughout a hearing in federal bankruptcy court. Then a boulder bounced down from the bar to stop the day's travel altogether.

And probably more important to baseball in the long run was the possible landslide started when Washington's two powerful democratic senators—Henry M. Jackson and

Process of Education

LINN — One young game violator can educate himself out of trouble, thanks to the sentence passed down by Magistrate Court Judge Clem C. Gove here.

The teenager was fined $50 and costs and given a four month suspended jail sentence by Judge Gove for transporting an illegal deer, but the judge said he would credit the boy with $25 for a 500 word theme on why we must have wildlife conservation.

Additionally, the youngster can earn $5 off the fine or each grade of S or better made at the end of the current school semester. And the jail sentence is suspended as long as the defendant helps his mother with housecleaning, washing and general work for four months.

Warren G. Magnuson — announced they would sponsor legislation putting baseball under antitrust laws. Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., was to sponsor similar legislation in the House.

The senators said the antitrust action wouldn't have any bearing on the Seattle-Milwaukee situation, "but rather could apply only against the American League in future actions."

"We'll probably introduce the legislation the first of next week, after the Easter recess," Jackson said. "I don't want to go into too much detail, but it would unequivocally put baseball under antitrust legislation."

He admitted that getting such legislation would be tough, "but I'm a realist and expected a hard fight. We've been assured of a hearing date," he added.

Bankruptcy referee Sidney C. Volinn's comment in the Seattle hearing case in his usual quiet, calm tone, but the impact seemed to change the whole mood of the proceedings.

"I must confess I'm intrigued by this section in your constitution about proceedings in bankruptcy court," Volinn told the American League attorneys.

That section of the constitution was brought up by William Dwyer, special assistant Washington state attorney general. Dwyer held held his peace throughout the day because he said he didn't want to prejudice an $82 million damage-antitrust suit that would follow a Pilot move.

But when it came time for the specific issue — to show cause why the club shouldn't be sold to the Milwaukee Brewers Baseball Club, Inc. — Dwyer sprang to life and began picking at the league constitution.

Dwyer argued in his closing statement that under baseball law the league takes over any franchise as soon as it enters a bankruptcy court. He said that being the case the club could hardly say it couldn't meet its debts because the American League wasn't in financial trouble.

Volinn then asked Dwyer if under that same constitution the league wasn't free to sell the club anyway. Dwyer said no, not if the constitution was taken as a whole and especially in the light of league promises to keep the club in Seattle for the 1970 season and underwrite its expenses.

With that, league attorneys popped up and declared the league never committed itself to operate the club in Seattle for Dickneite is special programs biologist for the Department of Conservation and one of his special programs is supervising the stocking of turkeys. He's just wound up a highly successful year.

As the April 22-28 spring turkey season approaches, the stocking season ends. There were 190 birds trapped in the past year and then delivered to new homes in 10 counties. The average release was 18 birds, six gobblers to 12 hens.

Department trappers use mostly young hens who have not established a nesting pattern in a given area. Paul Prow, area manager at the Sam A. Baker Wildlife Area, had one fine morning when he caught 22 turkeys with one shot of the cannon net used in turkey trapping.

Of that bunch, 12 were young hens. Turkeys were taken from the Sam Baker area, Caney Mountain Refuge in Ozark County, Carman Spring Wildlife Area at Willow Springs, Peck Ranch Wildlife Area near Winona, plus some portions of

However, Volinn let the matter hang in the new uncertainty and recessed the hearing until Tuesday morning. He said he wanted to think about the constitutional question and added that there were other matters still to be discussed.

Those matters included the late arrival on the judicial scene of attorneys for Seattleite Fred Ruge, who wanted to make a

Schoendienst Sees Move Runs In Face Lifting of Red Birds

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A year ago the St. Louis Cardinals were odds-on favorites to win a third straight National League pennant and they turned out to be the biggest flop of the season, limping home fourth, 13 games behind the Mets in the NL East.

So now, after winter trades sent away outfielders Curt Flood and Vada Pinson, catcher Tim McCarver and relief hurler Joe Hoerner, Manager Red

Allen played all his 117 games at first base for the Phillies last year. He would have played more but he didn't show up for work every day and was suspended.

"We will also have Carl Taylor, obtained from Pittsburgh, at first base and in the outfield," adds Schoendienst. "We are switching Lou Brock from left field to right field and will have Jose Cardenal, obtained from Cleveland for Vada Pinson, in center field with Vic Davallito. Taylor also was a catcher in the

An attorney for the Pilots radio network argued that a $212,500 contract gave Golden West Broadcasters, Inc., veto power over any move, or else the club's radio rights in Milwaukee. He added that Golden West would settle for the contract money.

Volinn had another surprise in store for the Pilots, Milwaukee interests and the league. He exploded the news on the Pilots that as far as he was concerned there was no concrete offer from the Milwaukee Brewers Baseball Club, Inc.

Jaynes Changes Mind

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — David Jaynes, Bonner Springs High School quarterback who signed with Alabama five weeks ago, reversed his field and announced today he will accept a University of Kansas football scholarship.

The widely sought 6-1, 190-pound athlete signed a Big Eight letter of intent with Kansas, the university reported, and told coach Pepper Rodgers he will sign the national letter. A national letter may not be signed before May 6.

At the time he signed with Alabama, it was understood he was not bound to that choice.

"I've had a long time to think about this and weigh my earlier decision on which school I wanted to attend," Jaynes said.

"After making a choice I started to wonder was it right? The people in Bonner Springs, all my friends and the kids I went to school with were disappointed because they had hoped of seeing me play in college.

"The townspeople and the students mean a lot to me. Their support and encouragement has been one of the main reasons for any success I have had. My mother and dad will get to see me play and be part of my college career and to me this is everything."

Jaynes said Kansas "with coach Rodgers and with their new facilities - The Jayhawk Towers new housing complex where athletes will live next year and the new artificial turf on the field - I want to have a great future. They can't miss and I want to be part of it and remain a loyal Kansan."

Rodgers was elated with the signing of Jaynes, who planned to be in Lawrence this afternoon to watch Kansas' opening spring practice session. Bonner Springs schools were out for Easter vacation.

"When we first saw David Jaynes," Rodgers said, "I thought he was one of the finest prospects we've had in the state and I have seen nothing that would change my mind. I expect David to have a great career with

Schoendienst Sees Move Runs In Face Lifting of Red Birds

Schoendienst figures he's all set in pitching with Bob Gibson, Steve Carlton and Nelly Briles as the big three. Mike Torres, 10-4 as a rookie last year, has a good chance to become No. 4 starter.

"We think we might have two new good relief men in Tom Hilgendorf, who looked good last fall, and Sal Campisi, who pitched this winter for a team (Lacey) in the Dominican Republic managed by Billy Muffett, our pitching coach."

"When Campisi got up in the bullpen down there the fans stood up and cheered. He was that good. His earned run record was 0.57."

The Cardinals probably had the most expensive team in baseball last season. Despite having traded off Flood and McCarver, Bing Devine, who helped build the Mets, has added more speed, more home runs and more runs in getting Allen and Cardenal.

Based on 1963 averages the Red Birds gain 22 homers in view of Allen's 32 with Philadelphia. And with Cardenal's 36 stolen bases and Allen's nine they added 29 steals, more youth and 42 more runs.

"We can use the runs," says Schoendienst.

Gun thefts are on the rise. Many of the victims are gun dealers and collectors, but most are sportsmen. There's not much the honest, run of the field hunter and shooter can do about it except insure, take certain precautions and trust to luck.

It seemed that a day failed to pass during the mid-winter months that the papers weren't full of gun theft articles.

Your guns may be fully covered in your home policy under "household contents" — but don't count on it. Check with your agent to be sure. You may even want to insure them under a special rider. In any case, be sure that an exact valuation is placed on each gun, by serial number, and that you have a full list of the serial numbers of your guns on file.

What can be done to keep guns from being stolen?

Little enough — but the following steps may help:

While on a hunting trip, even for the day, never leave guns or gun cases in your car or truck where they can be seen. If you stay in a motel, always take your guns in with you at night. A thief can spot a hunter's car or truck a mile away, and knows its a treasure trove of guns, cameras, ammunition and binoculars.

If you have a gun cabinet at home, place it where it can't be seen from the outside. Better yet, keep your guns hidden. We know a hunter who keeps a full gun cabinet stocked with "loaner" guns as a decoy for burglars, and his good guns stashed elsewhere. A farmer friend keeps only his work guns at home — a couple of .22's and in old shotgun. The rest of his mustkets are kept hidden with a friend in town.

Another suggestion is that you take your guns along in the trunk of your car when leaving home for the day.

Don't keep guns where they can be seen by casual visitors in your home, and never display them to strangers. It doesn't pay to advertise, even though you are proud of each gun.

In almost each case of guns stolen from the home... it is generally public knowledge that the person owned good guns: It only pays a dealer to advertise, not a proud owner.

Some of this increase in gun thefts may be a reflection of all the publicity that guns and gun ownership have gotten recently. And as restrictive gun laws increase and tighten, we can expect a corresponding increase in the underworld traffic of hot guns.

Ol' man winter gave the golfers a break about two weeks ago, but since has been stubborn.

With the smell of spring in the air and warm weather at hand, local and area golfers streamed to the private and public courses in big numbers but since have been restricted to indoor putting to feed their desire to roam the greens.

Many of these golfers could probably qualify for the "duffer" category because they do almost as much hacking at the golf ball as they do hitting.

I for one had big plans of trying my luck — for the first time — at the game... and hope that the weather will break so that I can get my feet wet... but not literally.

Mississippi county track athletes from Charleston and East Prairie high school represented Southeast Missouri well in the State Class L and M indoor track and field events in Columbia over the weekend.

Wavie Reed won the hurdle events of Class L and was the only double winner on the day. He led Class L to a fourth place finish, scoring 12 points.

Henry Franklin picked up six of East Prairie's 9 1/2 points by winning the 60-yard dash as the Eagles tied for sixth in the Class M meet.

Franklin turned in a 6.4 time to equal the record set in 1952 and held by five athletes. The last time the record was equaled was in 1968 by Jim Cameron of Brentwood. The mark was set by Paul Hunt of KC Perm-Day.

East Prairie's 880-yard relay team of Robert Falkoff, Henry Franklin, Ricky Cobbs, Anise Davis, tied for second with Richmond at a time of 1:39.0, two tenths of a second off the winning time of Brookfield (1:38.8).

The only other SEMO team to place in one of the three classes was from Pemisoc county fourth in the high jump with a 5-8 mark and its mile relay squad placed fourth with a 3:51.7 time.

Symington Missed His Chance For Presidency Two Ways in 1960

By THOMAS W. OTTENAD
A Washington Correspondent in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

He was a strong long-shot bet for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960. But the stalemate he needed at the Democratic national convention to fulfill his hope as "everybody's second choice" never developed. John F. Kennedy won it all on the first ballot at Los Angeles.

Then the second prize disappeared, too. Kennedy became convinced that he needed the South to win the White House. To capture Dixie he decided that he needed not Symington but Lyndon B. Johnson as his vice-presidential running mate.

This one-two punch was one of the few setbacks ever suffered by Symington, one of those favored few who appear to have been marked for success from birth. He is a member of an old, well-to-do Maryland family. He made his fortune before he was 40 years old, and a little later turned to public life.

He started in the scrappy Harry S. Truman era as a tough, effective director of half a dozen federal agencies. For the last 17 years he has been a more cautious Senator, doing what is regarded as a first-rate job for Missouri and gaining influence in the last few years in the field of military policy, on which he has long concentrated.

It is difficult to tell even now just how close he came to the vice-presidency in 1960, and, as events turned out the presidency itself, Symington will not discuss it. There are, however, persons who were close to him in 1960, as well as intimates of the late President, who are convinced that the Missouriian was Kennedy's first choice for the vice-presidential nomination.

Before the nominating convention, the Post-Dispatch has learned, Kennedy himself twice sought a private agreement with the Missouriian, who was then after the presidential nomination. The Massachusetts Senator wanted an understanding that he could have Symington's convention delegates if he needed them for the nomination. The Missouri camp rejected the proposal.

Kennedy on at least three occasions made it clear privately to Symington's representatives that he wanted Symington as his Vice President. The last of these assurances came in the form of a private explanation on July 14, 1960 just a few hours before he announced that Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas would be his running mate.

Kennedy told Clark M. Clifford, Symington's chief adviser, that after his own nomination the night before he still believed that Symington was his best choice. However, he went on, a group of Southerners had urged strongly the selection of Johnson, arguing that the Southerner would carry of the Bay of Pigs crisis. After a private breakfast at the White House, Symington said, "the President asked me to come down to his office for a minute. We talked about the Bay of Pigs, and he said, 'This is rough. I wish to God you had gone into West Virginia.'"

There is a belief among some that Symington had had his eye on the White House long before 1960. When he ran for the Senate the first time, in 1952, some of his opponents charged that he was seeking only a stepping stone to higher things.

One of his friends concurs, remarking, "When he went back to Missouri I think the idea was to create a political base for himself with the expectation that when the opportune time arrived he would have Truman's backing in a try for the White House."

In this connection a relative remembers a story told by an older friend who had asked Symington when he was a young man what he intended to be.

The answer, so goes the story: "I'm going to be President of the United States."

If it was only a joke, it was strangely prescient.

Except for his failure in 1960, the Senator from Missouri has sailed through life with a favoring breeze at his back. The Symington family of Maryland was well-connected, as Eastern Establishment members like to say. The children went to the right schools and knew the right people.

A year after leaving Yale without his bachelor of arts degree because of a deficiency in mathematics, young Stuart was married in a glittering Washington society wedding attended by President Calvin Coolidge. His bride, the former Evelyn Dadsforth, was from a wealthy family that was prominent socially and politically. The example of his father-in-law, the late James W. Wadsforth, later became a powerful influence in Symington's decision to enter public service. Wadsforth, a Republican, had an outstanding career as Senator and Representative from New York.

The young couple went to Rochester, N.Y., where Symington went to work in a steel plant owned by wealthy uncles. Ambitious and hard-working, he studied mechanical and electrical engineering in night school and through correspondence courses. Although he started at the bottom, working briefly as an ironmolder and chipper, the way was open to the top, and he moved into executive positions.

With sizable loans from his uncles, he bought two businesses of his own. He was shrewd, hard-driving and talented as an organizer and executive. He quickly made successes of the businesses and then did the same for a Baltimore steel firm in an immensely profitable association. At 36 years old, he went into a brief semiretirement with a fortune already made. At the same time Mrs. Symington had emerged as a successful, $1000-a-week "society singer" in posh New York supper clubs.

In 1938 he moved to St. Louis to take over the ailing Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. Liberal labor policies, hard-nosed business skill and a contract to produce turrets for American bombers in World War II soon made it a success and brought Symington another tidy fortune, estimated at $1,000,000.

So in 1948 he was ready for new worlds to conquer when President Truman asked him to go to Washington to help in the mammoth job of returning the nation to a peacetime footing. As high-level troubleshooter, he moved swiftly. In the next six and a half years he was head of the Surplus Property Disposal Program, assistant secretary of war for air, the first Secretary of the Air Force, chairman of the National Security Resources Board and, finally, "cleanup" administrator of the scandal ridden Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He was confirmed each time by the Senate without a dissenting vote.

He was 44 years old when he came to the Capital. He was not afraid of a fight and he scored some significant victories. As surplus property administrator he was credited with defeating the powerful Aluminum Co. of America in a fight that opened the aluminum industry to competition for the first time. At the resources board he refused to go along with prices on tin set by an international cartel and was later credited with saving the United States $500,000,000.

By all odds the biggest, roughest fight of his career involved the military. As assistant secretary of war for air, he was assigned to monitor Truman's proposal, eventually enacted in 1947, to create an independent Air Force and unify the three military services in a new Department of Defense. The Navy fought the plan bitterly. Even after it was approved by Congress, the Navy renewed the struggle in the B-36 bomber fight of 1949.

Symington hired a top investigator and mounted a furious and successful counterattack. A retired Air Force general who was in the thick of the fight gives Symington high praise, even though he is no longer a complete admirer of the Missouriian: "He got in and fought like a tiger. He fought with bare knuckles. Goddamit, he slashed... when Stu takes after you he just slaughters you."

By 1952, when he resigned from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Symington was ready and eager to run for the Senate. When the late Jacob M. Lashly and other prominent St. Louisans urged him to make the race, he jumped in. With his attractive wife and two sons joining in, he waged an energetic, well-financed campaign that won both grass-roots and organization support. He won the Democratic nomination by a 2-to-1 margin, even though his major opponent, State Attorney General J. E. (Buck) Taylor, had President Truman's endorsement. In the fall he defeated the Republican incumbent, James P. Kem, by 150,000 votes, although Dwight D. Eisenhower was carrying Missouri for the GOP by 30,000 votes. Symington's victory was the start of a political career that has made Symington the most phenomenal vote-getter in Missouri's history.

In the Senate Symington has concentrated largely on defense committee work rather than on legislation. Agriculture and the gold drain are other major interests. One of his few significant legislative achievements was an amendment to the foreign aid law in 1967 directing the President to cut off aid to any country diverting such assistance or an excessive share of its own resources to military purposes. The provision was watered down substantially last year.

Symington has headed important Senate investigations that uncovered questionable practices in the Government's secret stockpiling of strategic materials. The inquiry led to annual savings estimated at $100,000,000 in grain storage fees paid by the Government.

Symington turned an early spotlight on the Soviet Union's growing air power. He was instrumental in instigating the Senate's investigation two years ago into the U.S. air war against North Vietnam and the current inquiry into foreign military commitments. Despite his tenure in the Senate, he has never been chairman of a full committee.

Early in his career he played a key role in the Army-McCarthy hearings. Symington clashed repeatedly with the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, once telling the Wisconsin Republican in an angry exchange that he had "better go to see a psychiatrist."

Some critics charged that Symington was ineffective in the dispute. However, in 1954 Raymond P. Brandt, then chief Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, credited Symington and another Missouri-Democrat, the late Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr., with being more outspoken against McCarthy and McCarthyism than any other Democrat except former Senator William Benton of Connecticut.

One of the widely recognized strengths of his office is its attention to Missouri's interests. He has been highly successful in obtaining approval of such bread-and-butter projects as federal dams and buildings. His staff said that he spent almost a year of personal effort in persuading the late Senator Theodore F. Green (Dem.), Rhode Island, then head of the Senate Rules Committee, to clear the way for the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial project in St. Louis. When the Air Force was looking for a new combat plane, reportedly it was Symington who persuaded it to consider the Phantom jet made for the Navy by the McDonnell Aircraft Corp. in St. Louis.

His conduct in office has come under criticism only a few times. When he was surplus property administrator, a congressional committee denounced his recommendation that Government pipelines be sold for transmission of oil, arguing that a far greater return was possible if they were sold to gas producers. In 1958 Symington was named at a House subcommittee hearing as having interceded with the Federal Communications Commission in behalf of a St. Louis firm that obtained a license to a television channel. Symington's voting record is strongly liberal and pro-labor. In recent years a slightly more conservative trend has appeared. Americans for Constitutional Action credits him with voting the conservative position only 18 per cent of the time since that group started keeping records in 1955. However, his rating, which had never been higher than 8 per cent, jumped to 27 per cent in 1964. Since then it has mounted steadily, reaching 44 per cent in 1968.

The Missouriian has a reputation as a careful voter. Recently a freshman Senator from the Midwest got this bit of advice from an older, Eastern liberal: "If you are in doubt on an issue, vote with Symington. That's my rule of thumb."

Dr. Popp to Address Club In East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE—Money is still being received for the heart machine fund, spearheaded in this county by Mrs. Howard Schneider. Mrs. Schneider reports that there is now $5,125.16 in the fund and checks are being received almost daily, but since the need is so important, she asks that all persons remember the fund when making memorial contributions or charity givings of any kind.

Dr. Carl G. Popp, chairman of a hospital committee to oversee the providing of the intensive unit for coronary patients, is very optimistic about this unit and says that "as many as half of the heart disease patients who now die can be saved" with the proper equipment; equipment that the Sikeston Hospital has not had with the exception of one portable monitoring unit that can serve only one patient at a time.

Dr. Popp will be in East Prairie April 13 where he will speak to the Woman's Improvement Club at the home of Mrs. James Bruce, Jr. His topic will, most probably, be "How to Save Your Husband".

Dr. Popp said that the only uncertainty is funds to purchase the equipment for the intensive care ward. The federal government has approved a project in which funds would be supplied to operate the unit during the first years as a pilot project. A decision is expected by the end of the month whether funds can be released for the purpose, however, Dr. Popp said that contributions from people in the area who will benefit from the project and whose lives might be saved by it, will aid in making the payments.

The intensive care unit would provide equipment to detect changes in heart beat in time for corrective measures to be taken before brain damage or death occurs during the critical early days of a heart attack.

week not to sell Israel 50 fighter planes.

"Appeasement is not the way to deal with the Arabs," Pollack said.

He said that the Jews should keep Jerusalem and charged that the Arabs had exploited the refugee problem "to embarrass Israel."

He said that the Jews had taken in Jewish refugees and asked why Israel couldn't work out an exchange of refugees with the Arab countries.

Pollack said that a quarter million Arabs have stayed in Israel since formation of the Jewish state, they have prospered and have every right of citizenship except to serve in the military.

Discussing Israel's defense needs, he explained that the country can make everything it needs except "planes and tanks."

The Rev. Pipes Jones introduced the speaker.

Joe Williams, minister of music of the First Baptist church, sang "Holy City" accompanied by Miss Jane Gwaltney at the piano.

Guests of the club were Mrs. Jake Pollack and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Pollack, all of Cape Girardeau, and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Yoffie.

Patrol Sgt. George Montgomery of Poplar Bluff will speak on highway safety at next Monday's Rotary meeting, Johnson announced.

Dr. Carl G. Popp will discuss the need for an intensive care unit for heart patients at Missouri Delta Community Hospital at a joint meeting of the Sikeston and Morley Rotary clubs here April 13, Watson announced.

Medical Center May Take Control of Ozark Air Lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Lester E. Cox Medical Center at Springfield, Mo., would take control of Ozark Air Lines if a Civil Aeronautics Board examiner's recommendation Tuesday is adopted by the board.

Examiner Ross I. Newmann approved the proposal of the medical center to acquire 18 per cent of the stock of the airline. He said this would give the center control of Ozark but would not create a monopoly or strain competition.

Floyd W. Jones of Springfield, who died a year ago, willed 490,000 shares of Ozark stock to the center and turned over 500,000 additional shares to the Citizens Bank of Springfield as trustee for the center for five years.

The board may adopt the examiner's findings if no petition for review is filed within 30 days.

was approved by the council by a three to two margin.

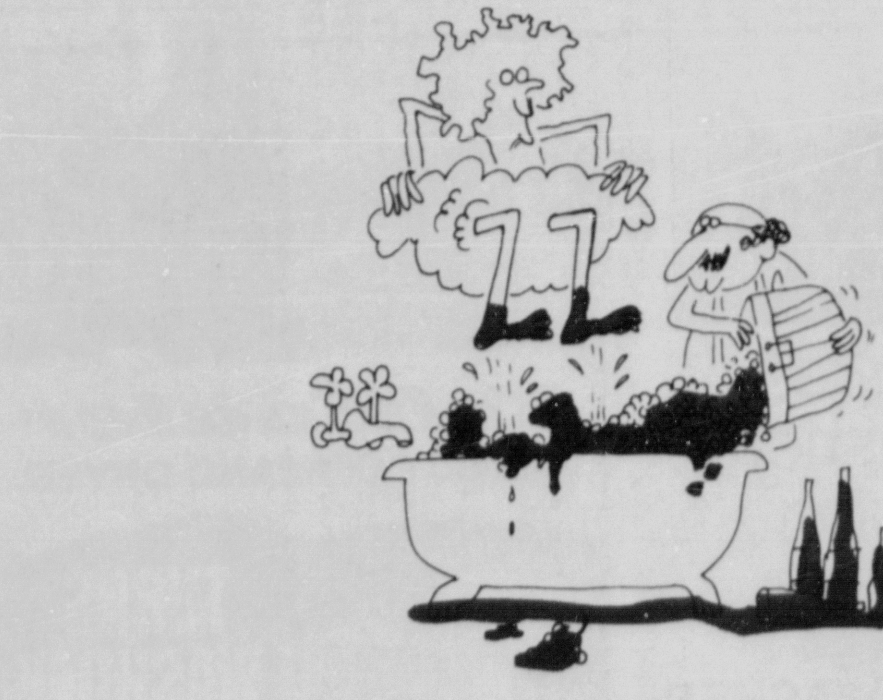

Bud Waters from Waters and Associates Engineers presented to the council the preliminary plans for water, sewer, and storm drainage improvement projects.

Water improvement projects include a new well, water purification treatment plant and additional water pressure storage tank and increased capacity water distribution lines to various sections of the city.

Sewer improvements projects calls for providing service into the Powers second addition and the Fletcher additions to the city. Storm drainage is designed to provide enclosed storm drainage along South Shannon, Folk, East Ramsey out to the city limits.

The council approved a bid of $2,450. from Pope Motors, East Prairie, for a 1970 model Pontiac police car.

Fielding Potasknick, city attorney presented a resolution for adjusting funds on hand into specific accounts for operation and maintenance of the city's utility systems. The resolution

Is any part of your property used as a commercial establishment?

b. If "Yes" — Is this house on a place of 10 acres or more, or is any part of this property used as a commercial establishment or medical office?

Yes, 10 acres or more
Yes, commercial establishment or medical office
No, none of the above

Funny question? Right. Useful question? Right again. The improbable things you get asked on your Census Form not only make it fun to fill out—they actually tell the government a great many useful things about your community, your family, and yourself.

The questions on housing, for example, give the government an idea of what kind of neighborhood you live in. If it turns out that you and your neighbors have substandard housing—then something can be done about it.

And that's only one reason why your form is important. It also can affect your representation in Congress, the kind of school your baby will grow up to attend, and even the kind of transportation that will serve your community in the future.

So when April 1st arrives, be sure to answer all the questions. Your Census Form is not only as confidential as your vote—it's just as important.

A GROWING NATION

The U.S. population has increased more than 50 times since the first census counted 3,929,214 Americans (including 697,697 slaves). The 1970 total is expected to be between 205 and 210 million. The Census Bureau's estimate at the first of the year was 204,334,344.

"VIETNAMIZATION" means transferring combat responsibility from U.S. to South Vietnamese troops. To hasten the process, special schools have been set up in South Vietnam to train the Vietnamese under guidance of American personnel. New lieutenants, top left, parade in graduation ceremonies at South Vietnam's military academy, a four-year school modeled after West Point. In Saigon, bottom photos, machine-gun training is given at the noncommissioned officers combat school while students get howitzer instruction at an artillery school. At right, South Vietnamese paratroopers jump from a C-119 flying boxcar after completing airborne training. Some of the North Vietnamese leadership fear that Vietnamization will not only prolong the war, but seriously affect Hanoi's chances of penetrating the south.

The Burger Court

The Supreme Court is up to full strength with President Nixon's appointment of G. Harrold Carswell (Senate confirmation pending) to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Justice Abe Fortas last May. The President's first choice, Clement Haynsworth, was rejected by the Senate. Shown above is the "Burger Court" with seniority of justices indicated by the date of appointment.

Cotton Insect Scouting Plan Wins Praise

PORTAGEVILLE - "We've been in the cotton insect scouting program since its beginning," said Ken Smitten, farm manager.

Smitten told Area Extension Agriculture Agent W. F. James he thought the program was one of the important programs provided for cotton producers by the University of Missouri.

In 1969 one hundred Missouri Delta farmers operating 17,000 acres participated in the program. Reports from the nine young college students, who scouted this acreage, show that an average of one application of insecticide per acre was made to this cotton. This was slightly higher than the .73 applications per acre average for the previous eleven years.

The program is provided at cost to those who subscribe to it. The 80 cents per acre plus $3 per field charge goes into salary and mileage for the scouts and pays a share of the supervisor's expenses.

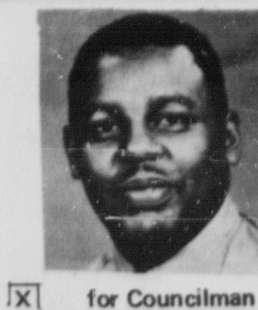

The cost of cotton insect scouting can be considered as one good management tool to protect your interest in a high cost crop.

The work of the cotton insect scout can save you more than the cost, just by avoiding one needless application of an insecticide.

Applications to enroll in the Cotton Insect Scouting Program are available at the University of Missouri Extension Centers in Pemiscot, Dunklin, Scott, Stoddard, Mississippi and New Madrid counties and at the Delta Center in Portageville. The deadline for sign up in this program is April 15th, according to Area Agriculture Agent, W. F. James.

Census Takers Easy to Identify

Householders will not have any difficulty identifying enumerators for the 1970 Census of Population and Housing, District Manager Byron Mercer pointed out today.

Enumerators, or census takers (most of whom are women), will start making their rounds in the area Wednesday and are expected to complete their work in three to five weeks.

Each census taker will wear a red, white, and blue identification card. This card bears the seal of the Department of Commerce, and the words

East Prairie Man Director Of Cattlemen

JEFFERSON CITY-Zack Dismukes, East Prairie, was named by the Missouri Cattleman's Association as director for the East Prairie district.

The association expanded their districts from eight to 20. This change in the organizational structure was made to coincide with the University of Missouri extension service districts. Each district will be represented by one director.

Alan King, cowman-rancher, Dadeville, was elected president. Bill Sidwell, owner-operator of Hereford Ranch, Queen City, was elected vice president.

Two Held in Theft of Farm Chemical

CARUTHERSVILLE - Two caruthersville men are being held in the Pemiscot county jail in connection with the theft of 32 five-gallon cans of a herbicide early this morning. The herbicide valued at $3,200 and was recovered when the men were arrested.

The Pemiscot county sheriff's department identified the men as Emmitt Huen, 41, and William Palmer, 39, both of Caruthersville. A spokesman for the sheriff's department said charges were filed Friday against the two men.

A deputy said the Treflan was stolen from the Mehrle Farms southwest of Caruthersville at 3:20 a.m. Friday.

The two men were apprehended at 4 a.m. Friday by Deputy Wesley Mayo and Caruthersville Assistant Chief of Police Pat Malone.

The chemical was recovered from the station wagon the suspects were arrested in.

Arbyrd Boy Dies of Meningitis

ARBYRD - A four-year-old Arbyrd child, Robert (Bobby) Turner, died Monday at 5:15 p.m. at the Dunklin County Memorial Hospital from an undetermined illness.

An autopsy on the child's body, disclosed the cause of death resulted from a form of meningitis, a family member said. The autopsy report showed the child died of meningococcus meningitis. A physician said there was no real danger the contagious disease would spread, adding that the only danger was with the immediate family of the child.

Dunklin County Health Administrator Troy Wilson said at Kennett, an investigation was under way to determine if the boy had been in contact with persons from Fort Leonard Wood, where several soldiers have died of the disease in the past few months.

Bobby, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Don Turner of Arbyrd, died shortly after being admitted to the hospital yesterday afternoon.

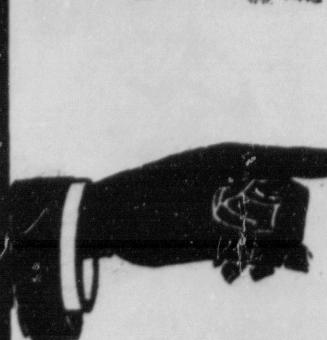

A family member said that Bobby became ill Saturday night and was running a temperature. By Sunday morning, "red spots" began breaking out on his face and body. Sunday afternoon, "blue spots" and the spots continued to break out on the child, according to a family member, and he was taken to a clinic in Cardwell, where he was rushed to the Dunklin County Memorial Hospital.

McDaniel Funeral Home is in charge of funeral arrangements. Survivors include his mother and father, a brother, Gary Don Jr. 6, and a sister, Teresa, 2.

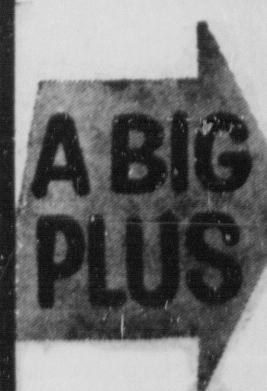

Meningococcus meningitis is described by the Encyclopedia Britannica as a disease which can affect all ages, but is primarily a disease of youth.

Meningitis is an inflammation of the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord.

If the total amount of water in all the world's oceans, ice fields, lakes, rivers, soil, rocks and atmosphere were added up, it would equal about 326 cubic miles. One cubic mile is about one trillion gallons of water, says The World Almanac. If the entire supply of water is considered one barrel (55 gallons), then the water in the oceans of the world would be 53 gallons, 1 quart, 1 pint and 3 ounces.

VOTERS FACE TOUGH
DECISION ON
REFERENDUM ISSUE

By Al Labouchere,
Missouri Press News Service
JEFFERSON CITY-Voters who go to the polls April 7, to decide the fate of the controversial income tax reform measure have a difficult choice.

Proponents of the tax measure say approval of the measure would, temporarily at least, alleviate financial needs facing education, welfare and mental health. They say a "no" vote would help usher in one of the bleakest financial crises in Missouri history.

"Unless additional tax revenues become available, the State Budget Office warns, 'Missouri will be forced to turn its back on progress and stagnate into decrepitude.'"

A major critic of the tax reform measure, Sen. Earl Blackwell, predicts a "overwhelming defeat" of the bill on April 7. He and his supporters led a successful drive late last year to bring the tax measure to a referendum vote. Blackwell contends that, "We can and we will fully fund all of our state services and state supported institutions next year with no increase in present tax rates."

Proposition No. 1 calls for corporations and individuals in higher income brackets to pay more state taxes. But many middle and lower income families will pay less taxes because of the higher standard deductions the proposition calls for. Supporters of the tax revision feel its merit lies in the fact that it shifts the burden to those who can afford to pay.

State Rep. Lloyd Baker, Randolph County Democrat, an opponent of the measure says, "Scare tactics are being used to persuade voters to approve the tax revision." He adds, "Those favoring the measure are going about it all wrong. They try to tell you it will be a tax decrease. How can the state raise that much money and give a tax decrease? The whole purpose of the tax proposal is to gain more money for the state."

Many educators seem to feel a crisis in public education at all levels can be expected if the measure is not approved. They say educational services would probably have to be sharply curtailed, the quality of education might be reduced with many good teachers leaving for better-paying jobs, and tuitions would continue to go up.

A statement published recently by the Missouri State Teachers Assn., warns that if Proposition No. 1 fails, "school districts faced with spiraling costs, growing enrollments and increased demands for educational services will be forced to greatly increase the local property tax, reduce the educational program or shorten school terms."

State aid to students attending public junior colleges throughout the state may be cut substantially, and higher tuitions for all students at the state colleges and universities may be expected unless voters approve the tax measure on April 7. This prediction came recently from the State Commission on Higher Education.

And the State Budget Office says that without the benefit of additional tax revenues, funds available for junior college districts would be reduced from $320 per student per semester to $261. "In order to maintain the current caliber of education these schools will have to place a limit on enrollment, increase the local school district property tax, or increase student fees."

"The problem does not end here," the Budget Office explains. "The exploding enrollments at all four campuses of the University of Missouri require additional buildings, equipment and operating funds. A 'hold fast' budget will lower the quality of education offered and deny a college education to those turned away for lack of space and facilities. Missouri will find itself falling behind its neighboring states in higher education."

Sen. Blackwell does not agree. "Those same selfish predictors of gloom will tell you that alternatives to increased state taxes will be chaos, financial disaster, closing of schools, turning mental patients out into the streets, a ruination of Missouri, etcetera, etcetera, etcetera. That, of course, is ridiculous and untrue," Blackwell adds. "Unless voters reject the income tax measure on April 7, they will find themselves caught in a tax spiral which will never be stopped." He says state spending should not be increased beyond the natural revenue growth of the state and predicts that there will be enough to take care of all needed expenditures.

Representative Baker states that, "State institutions can run on the same budgets they had last year. It won't hurt any state agency to hold the line right where it is without spending more and more money." Rep. Baker says he is not a protégé of Sen. Blackwell but is an interested member of the Missouri Legislature himself who feels that taxpayers are being pushed too far.

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has estimated that nearly 90 per cent of Missouri's half million retired persons would escape state income taxes entirely with the passage of the tax referendum.

Without increased tax revenues, the Budget Office warns, Old Age Assistance payments might have to be cut by six per cent, Aid to Dependent Children by four per cent, and Aid to Disabled could be cut by 3.1 per cent. And if that is not enough, payments for medical care services will have to be cut back by seven per cent.

Recently, Hilary F. Schmitz, president of the Missouri Assn. for Retarded Children, said, "State institutions in Missouri are tremendously understaffed, antiquated and dehumanizing places where people are treated like cattle in barns." In giving his "wholehearted support" to the statewide income tax referendum, he said, "If the residents of the state schools and hospitals are not to become second class citizens, substantially more tax support must be forthcoming."

"This is not a reflection on the staffs of our state schools and hospitals, but more of an indictment against public apathy and indifference that allows these ghetto conditions to exist," Schmitz added. He says some institutions are "completely inadequate to meet even minimal animal needs of patients."

Many persons and organizations who favor the income tax reform measure feel it will serve only as a temporary stop gap. Gov. Hearnes himself has said time and time again that passage of the tax bill will not be an end-all to the state's financial problems. It is a short run measure designed to get the state through another year.

Price & Waterhouse, a national non-partisan accounting firm recently analyzed Missouri's proposed tax bill. Its calculations showed that a husband and wife with two dependents, earning $12,500 a year or less will pay no increased state income taxes, and in most instances will pay less than their current tax. Such a family earning $15,000 per year will pay additional $27.

Blackwell has said these figures are unrealistic, that they were prepared on the assumption that everyone takes the standard deductions.

The Daily Standard, Sikeston, Mo.
Tuesday, March 31, 1970

Blackwell contends that few taxpayers, regardless of their income, take the standard deduction. He figures the new tax bill will raise taxes for all persons with incomes of $5,000 or more.

The decision facing voters April 7 is not an easy one. Few legislators including Gov. Hearnes are willing to speculate on the outcome. But whatever the consequences of the vote, it will be interesting to see which predictions become realities.

7,260 Aided

In 1969 by Health Program

PORTAGEVILLE - The health and family service program of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation served 1,100 persons in Scott county in 1969. The total number of persons served for the six-county area was 7,260.

The area includes Scott, Stoddard, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, and Dunklin counties.

There are 12 health and family service aides employed in the program. The program also had one medical secretary, Mrs. Mildred McClain, Malden, and the director, Mrs. Marilyn Cox, Dexter.

The central office is at the Malden Industrial Park. Employed as health aides in Scott county are Mrs. Lillie Webb, Scott City and Mrs. Bettie Redd, Sikeston.

These women work out of the Area Opportunity Center in each county. The center for the northern part of the county is on Airport Road.

The function of this program is to aid the indigent medically, to promote better health conditions and to provide training in care for the elderly and handicapped.

Two Awarded Scholarships

J.W. Shavers, Wardell, and Mrs. Irmgard Fran Jones, Hayti, both members of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission Area, have been awarded scholarships to the Governor's Conference on Urban Affairs.

The three-day conference begins Tuesday at Jefferson City.

A total of 100 persons were chosen by the conference planning committee for the scholarships. The scholarships, which range in dollar amounts from $65 to $100, cover registration fees, lodging, banquet costs, and, in some cases, transportation.

U.S. Jet Downs Red MIG

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Navy fighter-bomber escorting a reconnaissance plane shot down a MIG21 over North Vietnam Saturday, the U.S. Command announced today. It was the first kill claimed by the Americans over the North since the bombing halt 17 months ago.

A spokesman said he did not know if the MIG pilot fired at the Navy F4 Phantom jet and the unarmed RF4C Phantom photographic plane as they flew over Thanh Hoa province, 125 miles north of the Demilitarized Zone.

But he called the North Vietnamese plane an "attacking" aircraft, adding: "Undoubtedly it was in some sort of maneuver indicating that it was attacking the reconnaissance aircraft."

It was the 11th North Vietnamese plane claimed by U.S. aircraft, the spokesman said, but the first since Sept. 19, 1968, six weeks before President Johnson halted the bombing of North Vietnam. Despite the bombing halt, U.S. planes have continued to fly reconnaissance missions over North Vietnam regularly, accompanied by fighter-bomber escorts. Several have been shot down.

There was no American comment on a North Vietnamese claim that a Phantom reconnaissance plane was shot down by North Vietnamese gunners Sunday over Quang Binh province, just south of the Demilitarized Zone. The North Vietnamese report did not say what happened to the plane's two crewmen.

In the ground fighting, government units in the western Mekong Delta were credited with killing at least 33 North Vietnamese regulars Monday in the Seven Mountains area after rangers and armored units were shifted south to reinforce them.

JAN SARGENT, 18-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Sargent of 999 North Kingshighway, April calendar girl, is a Girl Scout, Red Pepper and musician. She is 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds... brown hair and hazel green eyes. Miss Sargent is a senior at Sikeston high school and a Miss Sikeston finalist.

Calendar Girl Outdoors

Year round outdoor activities, many including Adam, her six-month-old German shepherd puppy, fill the life of Jan Sargent, April calendar girl.

Miss Sargent daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Sargent, says: "I've been in Scouts since I was a Brownie, and believe it is a good organization," referring to Girl Scouts.

"It gives you some standards to live by and some fun things to do, nationwide opportunities like the canoe trip I took last summer," she continued. "We started out in Minnesota and went into national park territory and into Canada a little bit. We spent six days and nights canoeing, camping where we could find a place. It was very primitive."

Miss Sargent is active in choir work, Red Peppers and band at Sikeston high school where she is a senior. She plans to major in music in college, but has not made a final decision as to what school she will attend. Her goal is a master's degree in music therapy, a new field, which will qualify her to work as a therapist with mentally retarded children.

The Miss Sikeston contest last fall was fun, said Miss Sargent, and the calendar girl work is fun, too. But, she would not want to make modeling a career.

About military activity, Miss Sargent says she feels the United States should not get involved in Laos. This is the wrong way to solve the situation.

"I don't know the solution," she said, "but we have too many problems here" — like population — to become involved somewhere else and not even solve Vietnam first.

"People should write to their congressmen and even the President, and say what they feel. They do listen to their constituents," and read the letters. It has to be effective."

Miss Sargent is anxious to save the natural beauty of the United States so more people can enjoy outdoor activities.

News Briefs

New Quake Takes More Lives

GEDIZ, Turkey (AP) — A sharp new earthquake struck this devastated region of western Turkey today, killing at least 24 more persons and causing more damage in several villages.

The new tremor shook Gediz, where rescue workers still were digging out the victims of an earthquake last Saturday which took an estimated 130 lives.

Villages around the half-flattened town were hard hit by the new shock this morning.

"The figure of 24 dead in the new tremor is only preliminary," said a relief official.

Pavilion Closing Confirmed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Spanish international pavilion, "Jewel of the New York World's Fair," in 1964-65, and later moved to St. Louis, will close April 19 because of financial troubles.

Mayor A. J. Cervantes, who solicited private funds to move the pavilion and reassemble it in St. Louis, announced the closing after a 90-minute meeting with the Board of Directors.

Visitors trade to the tourist attraction was over estimated and construction costs under estimated, officials said recently.

The two-story building will be taken over by the Carondelet Savings and Loan Association of St. Louis, which holds a $25 million mortgage note on the building.

A spokesman for Carondelet said the firm might try to keep the pavilion going as a "showcase for St. Louis, not Spain."

Health Program Ending Because of Lack of Funds

A cutback in funds is bringing about the abolishment of the Scott County Health Center's home health agency program, Dr. Thelma C. Buckthorpe, administrator, announced today.

The program was designed primarily to provide an intensive type of nursing care for home bound patients with long-term illnesses to allow the disabled to maintain his independence in his own environment as long as possible. About 30 persons were receiving the service.

Dr. Buckthorpe said some chronically ill patients will continue to be served.

Requirements for a patient to have been eligible for the program were doctor's reference, Medicare insurance, home confined and hospitalized at least three days. Persons who needed the service but had not been in the hospital prior to the program had benefits from the Medicare insurance that paid 80 per cent of the costs of nursing visits after $50 had been paid by the patient. The patients were billed for the remaining 20 per cent of the visits.

The problem, Dr. Buckthorpe said, arose when Medicare funds were not received to pay for skilled nursing care. Dr. Buckthorpe said her agency does not have the money necessary to continue the program. Other factors that brought about discontinuance of the program, Dr. Buckthorpe said, are shortages of funds discovered in the county collector's office, people who paid county taxes under protest and less state funds.

The lack of funds, she said, required termination of the services of a nurse, a nurses aid and a secretary.

"This simply does not leave us enough personnel to carry on the program," Dr. Buckthorpe said. Dr. Buckthorpe said no payment will be made by the medicare program for home health services furnished to patients whose plan of treatment is established on or after Wednesday. For patients whose plan of treatment is established before Wednesday, no payment will be made for services furnished after Dec. 31, 1970.

She said the agreement between the secretary of health, education and welfare and the Scott county agency will be terminated in accordance with the Social Security Act.

Bluff Police Resignations Accepted

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Resignations tendered March 10 by the city's 22 uniformed policemen were accepted today by city manager David Pence, who said he would begin immediately taking applications for replacements.

The resignations, submitted by all members of the force except for the police chief, two radio dispatchers and clerical workers, were to have been effective April 1.

Pence met, however, with the 22 and gave them the rest of today off. He said they would be eligible to reapply for their positions at no loss of seniority or rank until 5 p.m.

Police submitted demands for $150 a month pay raise and increased fringe benefits March 1 and later submitted their resignations.

Pence said he would submit to the city council a proposal that starting pay for policemen be hiked from $4,041 annually to $4,200.

The pay, he said, would go to $4,500 after three months, to $4,800 after one year and $5,100 after five years.

Classes Resume In Bluff Schools

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Classes resumed today at 12 public schools following ratification of an agreement between negotiators of the Community Teachers Association and the school board.

The agreement, reached last Friday night, calls for minimum pay hikes to starting teachers of $100 for 1970-71.

If additional state aid is forthcoming through provisions of the proposed state income tax revision, the starting pay will be boosted $450 from the current level of $5,700.

Classes were suspended in public schools three days last week after members of the CTA set up pickets Tuesday. The agreement reached on pay calls for the teachers to make up the classroom days missed.

South Korean Bid to Fool Airliner Hijackers Fails

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — A Japanese jetliner hijacked by leftist students with short samurai swords and dynamite landed today at a South Korean airport disguised to look like one in North Korea. But the ruse failed and the 15 hijackers demanded to be flown north.

They insisted that all 100 other persons on the plane, including two Americans, go along with them.

The crew of the Japan Airlines plane awaited daybreak Wednesday to depart.

The plane was down at Seoul's Gimpo International Airport for four hours before the hijackers apparently decided the landing at Seoul was a trick. The pilot then asked the control tower to let him take off.

"We want to land some 120 miles north of here," he said, apparently meaning at Pyongyang, the North Korean Capital and the Destination the hijackers had demanded.

Sources at the airport said the local manager of Japan Air Lines sent the hijackers a note telling them the pilot could take them to Pyongyang but they should allow the other 95 or more passengers and crewmen to get off in Seoul. The sources said there was no immediate response from the hijackers.

The South Koreans had rigged up signs to make the airport appear to be Pyongyang's and tried other devices to convince the hijackers they were in the Communist North, but the ruses failed.

Learning from the pilot's call shortly before 7 p.m. that the tricks had failed, the authorities withdrew a group of South Korean troops who had been standing guard near the plane in North Korean uniforms.

It was not known, however, whether the plane could make a safe flight to North Korea, particularly at night.

Yasuhiro Nakasone, director general of Japan's Self Defense Force, said the plane had entered North Korean air space after leaving Fukuoka but was refused permission to land in Pyongyang. He said he had received information that North Korean anti-aircraft guns fired near the airliner and that North Korean MIG21 jet fighters approached it.

The plane then flew to Seoul with six South Korean F5 jet fighters flying escort, Nakasone said.

Among the passengers aboard were two Americans: Herbert Brill of Pepsi-Cola Japan and Father Daniel S. MacDonald, a Maryknoll priest from San Francisco. All the rest were Japanese.

Brandishing short samurai swords, about 15 youths took over the Japan Air Lines Boeing 727 this morning shortly after it left Tokyo for Fukuoka, on the southwest coast of Japan.

The hijackers said they were members of the revolutionary Red Army student faction and told the pilot to head for North Korea. Instead he landed at Fukuoka, ostensibly for fuel.

The plane sat on the runway for five hours while authorities pleaded with the students to release the passengers and crew. Finally they let 23 passengers get off — women, children and one man who had a heart attack during the wait.

Officials in Seoul had been alerted meanwhile by the U.S. military command, and apparently plans already were under way to attempt a deception.

Flags and identifying signs at Seoul's Gimpo Airport were hurriedly taken down. Fake welcoming signs were put up. U.S. and South Korean military aircraft were moved out of sight. A unit of troops in North Korean uniforms was stationed inside the airport. The airport was closed to all other planes, and all civilians were kept more than a mile away from the terminal.

When the pilot contacted the Kimpo control tower, the airport identified itself as Pyongyang.

It was Japan's first plane hijacking.

Duffy Sentenced To Six-Month Term

LONG BINH, Vietnam (AP) — A military court sentenced a young U.S. Army officer today to six months' confinement and a $1,500 fine for the death of a Vietnamese prisoner of war. Two days ago he faced life imprisonment.

First Lt. James B. Duffy, 23, of Claremont, Calif., was found guilty Sunday of premeditated murder, but the eight-man court voted to reconsider its verdict when it found out the murder conviction carried a mandatory life sentence.

On Monday the court convicted Duffy of two lesser counts: involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy to commit manslaughter.

Jim Green Elected Rotary President

Jim S. Green was elected president of the Rotary club last night at a ladies night banquet at the Rustic Rock Inn. He and other new officers will take office July 1. Green will succeed Alex Waters.

Green, 30, lives at 101 Salcedo Road with his wife, Suzanne; daughter, Melissa Gayle, six and two sons, Steven Michael, five, and Jeffrey William, two. He has been a resident of Sikeston seven years.

He is a member of Concordia Lutheran church, where he is past president and board chairman; is president of the Scott County Youth Democrats, 10th district chairman of the Missouri State Young Democrats, president of the Scott County Bar Association and served last year as finance chairman of the Okeechobee district of the Boy Scouts of people."

The club accepted a slate of officers nominated by a committee. Other new officers are Gary Estes vice president; Paul Jobe, secretary; Clyde Launius, treasurer; and four directors: Jim Woods, club service; Jack Lopp, vocational service; Ken Williams, community service; and Lewis Blanton, international service.

Sydney Pollack, Cape Girardeau, who last month made his third visit to Israel, predicted that "someday peace will come to the war-torn country in the Middle East" but said there is no basis for negotiations now because Arab countries deny its existence.

He called the creation of the state of Israel "an age old attainment of the Jewish because the Arabs hold '40 votes' there.

"Russia is interested in getting influence in the area and the Russian presence is increasing," he said.

Pollack described United States aims as maintaining the status quo and protecting its commercial interests — especially its oil assets.

He said that the United States recently had shifted closer to the Arab position which, he charged, "could be counter productive to what we hope to achieve."

"A strong Israel guarantees no war in the area," he said. The decision not to let Israel planes is "not conducive to peace," he said.

Banon Unruly Defendants Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court upheld today the right of trial judges to remove disorderly, disruptive and disrespectful defendants from the courtroom.

"It is essential to the proper administration of criminal justice that dignity, order and decorum be the hallmarks of all court proceedings in our country," said Justice Hugo L. Black.

"The flagrant disregard in the courtroom of elementary standards of proper conduct should not and cannot be tolerated."

Therefore, the high court said through Black, there are at least three constitutionally permissible ways for a trial judge to handle an obstreperous defendant. He can be bound and gagged, but allowed to remain in the courtroom; he can be cited for contempt; or he can be taken out of the courtroom until he promises to conduct himself properly.

The ruling was unanimous. Separate concurring opinions were filed by Justices William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan Jr.

The decision is of major significance in light of a recent wave of disruptive trials.

The recent highly publicized trial of eight persons accused of conspiring to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago was disrupted repeatedly. At its end, all the remaining defendants were sentenced for contempt of court by Judge Julius G. Hoffman.

One of the original defendants, Bobby G. Seale, was bound and gagged for a time before a mistrial was declared in his case.

Cotton Exports May Dip Lowest Since WWII

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cotton exports may dip this year to the lowest level since World War II, Agriculture Department analysts say.

But surplus supplies are expected to be the smallest since 1963, the analysts add.

The 1969-70 export total was estimated in a cotton situation summary at about 2,050,000 bales or approximately one-fourth less than last season.

In January the department estimated cotton exports for the marketing year ending July 31 at about 2.5 million bales. Increased world supplies and a relentless competition from manmade fibers were cited as reasons for the reduction.

Total use, including domestic consumption and exports, was projected at near 10.75 million bales, slightly less than last year. But the projected total is more than the 1969 U.S. crop, and thus will cut more deeply into the stockpile, now estimated at about six million bales by July 31, the smallest reserve since 1963, according to department records.

HATE MAKES WASTE

Hate drains time and energy, and gets no one anywhere.

If all the time Americans now spend hating each other was spent instead on working to improve whatever it is they dislike, there soon wouldn't be much of anything left to hate.

Since hatred hasn't resulted in anything except destruction, hurting everyone, might this constructive method be worth trying, for a change?

FLAG FLAP

Last fall, as her contribution to the Viet Nam moratorium, a 26-year-old mother of two decided to fly the American flag upside down from her porch in Wantagh, Long Island. For this method of dissent, Mrs. Elizabeth Hubner was arrested, searched, handcuffed, fingerprinted, and denied bail by a bondsman before being released on a charge of violating state criminal law. The New York statute prohibits showing "contempt, either by word or act, upon the flag."

Mrs. Hubner has been ordered to appear for trial on Tuesday, March 17, in the First District Court at Mineola, L.I. If convicted, she faces a possible sentence of one year and/or a $1,000 fine. As a high school girl a decade ago, Mrs. Hubner won the American Legion's good-citizenship award.

Since the November incident, the N.Y. State Court of Appeals has ruled, 5-2, that the right of free speech does not permit the use of the American flag in "dishonorable" ways as a form of protest. It upheld the conviction of a New York art dealer who displayed art in which the American flag was wrapped around a phallic symbol. In addition to state statutes, there is federal law signed by President Johnson in 1968 that makes it a federal crime to burn or desecrate the flag.

Smith Hempstone of the Washington Star wrote (Feb. 25) that "the wholly contemptible abuse of the American flag by the New Left" had encouraged "the established tendency of the right wing to appropriate the national flag and all its symbolism as its exclusive property." Manifestations of reaction against the New Left include the widespread use of flag decals and the sewing or affixing of miniature American flags onto police uniforms, a practice endorsed by President Nixon and followed by more than 1,000 of the nation's 18,300 police departments Old Glorys being used by all sides to bring about still more political polarization in an already divided nation.

MOTHER BELL'S BUSY SIGNAL

A "regrouping" of American Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s top executive structure will take place on Wednesday (April 1). In the most important change H. I. Romnes, now chairman and chief executive officer, will take on the additional title of president, succeeding Ben S. Gilmer.

An old song, from World War I, "Hello Central, Give Me No Man's Land," suddenly seems up-to-date again. Today, though, it isn't always necessary to call Central. The phone user sometimes is plugged into no man's land even when he dials the house or the apartment next door. Telephone service in the United States has joined the growing list of things that don't work as well as they did in the good old days.

Deterioration of telephone service was felt first in New York City, and has since spread to other metropolitan areas. A prime problem area is Wall Street, where the demand for telephone service was underestimated because brokerage firms failed to predict the late-1960s upsurge in trading volume. Another unexpected increase in telephone traffic occurred when the city government decided that welfare recipients were entitled to have city-paid telephone service.

Surveying the disastrous state of New York City telephone communications last year, Business Week stated: "The current chaos is so vast that it cannot be patched over or swept under the rug." The magazine added that "the blame seems to lie squarely in the lap of New York Telephone Co. and its parent, AT & T."

The problems of the Bell System could grow worse. With Picturephone service due to begin this year on a limited basis AT&T faces the task of virtually rewiring the entire country in the next decade. Moreover, the company not only must go to the financial community and the public for the tens of billions of dollars it needs for expansion but it also must push through dozens of unpopular rate increases simply to keep abreast of increases in wages and materials costs.

The quest for money already has begun. AT & T will call on its immense stockholding family next month to help raise a record $3.1 billion for expansion needs. The company's directors last Jan. 21 approved a plan to offer shareholders $1.57 billion principal amount of 30-year debentures, accompanied by warrants to buy 31.4 million shares of AT&T stock.

On the very day that AT&T announced its mammoth financing venture, the New York Telephone Co.'s president in charge of operations stated that phone service in and around the city was worse than it ever had been. "We're giving lousy service, and I know it's lousy," William G. Sharwell said. Little more than a month later, the New York Public Service Commission authorized New York Telephone to impose an interim rate increase of 8.5 per cent on residential telephones.

Many of the difficulties faced by New York Telephone and other AT&T affiliates are outside their control. Pay telephones in big cities are increasingly vandalized and looted. Fearful of crime, many persons call friends instead of visiting them, with the result that the average phone conversation is 20 per cent longer today than a few years ago. New York Telephone's uncollected bills average no less than $1.5 million a month.

Furthermore, the company is an enlightened employer. More than 18,000 of its 57,000 New York City workers are blacks and Puerto Ricans. As a result, New York magazine has pointed out, phone users in the metropolis "are getting closely and personally acquainted with the essence of the ghetto—its style, speech, manners, education and temper." The experience has been an uncomfortable one to date for both operator and telephone user. And New York Telephone, instead of being applauded for good intentions, is reviled even more for erratic service.

The Colonel said: "It is a good woman's notion that every woman whose idea of great happiness is not to have babies to put to bed every night, should be investigated."

An unconfirmed rumor rarely lasts much longer than 48 hours.

Trouble seems to do people good. The oldest looking woman in Sikeston at one time had never had any trouble, while the youngest looking woman in town of her age had had children, a mean husband and other kinds of trouble.

NEW YORK (AP) — The ability to say no is one of the keys to a safe life, as well as a long and happy one.

The wise person learns early that he must pick and choose as to what he does and where he goes. If he does everything everybody asks him to, he is certain to wind up behind the 8-ball or missing from the scene altogether.

Here, for example, are some invitations that usually lead only to trouble, embarrassment, or disaster: "Why don't we have our picnic here? The odds are only about one in 20 that those vines are poison ivy."

"You've never heard Beethoven's 'Moonlight Sonata' blown on a trumpet? Would you like to have my son play it for you?"

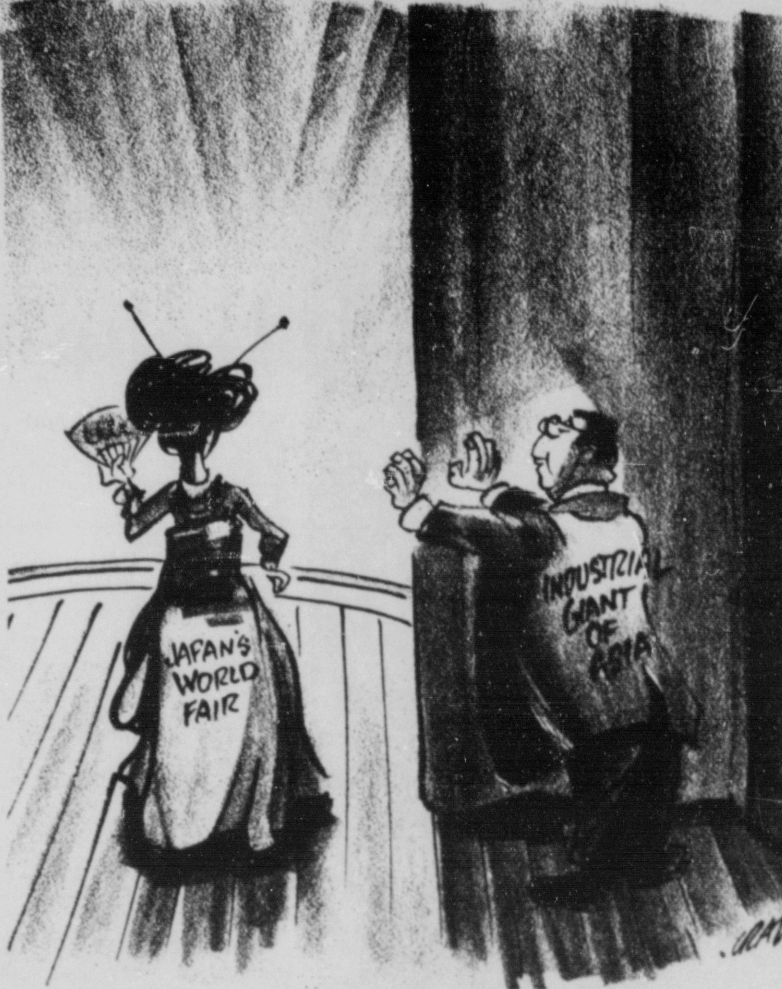

"Go ahead and call his bluff. He probably only has a lousy pair of dices."

"No, it's not exactly tobacco. But roll some into a cigarette, and I'll tell you later what it is. After all, you do trust me, don't you?"

"How about trying this new wonder drug my doctor prescribed for me? I does cause some people to break out with the hives, but that's fairly rare."

"Suppose you park here. I know it's in a no-parking zone, but surely the cops won't haul away your car if we're only in

The Missouri State Highway Patrol made a total of 145,520 arrests in 1969. This was an increase of 12 per cent over the number of arrests made in 1968. Nearly 95 per cent of these arrests were classified as "traffic" or motor vehicle associated arrests. The remaining arrests were in the criminal misdemeanor and felony category.

There were 137,684 motor vehicle arrests of which 88,095 were for hazardous moving traffic violations. This was an increase of 10.7 per cent over the number of those hazardous moving violation arrests made during the previous year. Among the offenses included in this category are those relating to careless and imprudent driving and driving while intoxicated.

Those arrests made by the Patrol last year for moving violations involving drinking numbered 4,549. The number of these driving while intoxicated arrests classified as motor vehicle misdemeanors totaled 4,474. There were also 75 driving while intoxicated felony arrests made by the Patrol Under Missouri Statutes the first two convictions for driving while intoxicated are misdemeanors, but the third and subsequent offenses are felonies.

The Patrol's Commercial Motor Vehicle Enforcement Division weighed 1,323,690 commercial vehicles last year. The Division made 25,213 arrests and issued 116,038 written warnings.

In addition to the arrests made by the Highway Patrol, the Scott, the President has stated 347,936 persons for minor infractions of the law. The overall carefully thought out Patrol also rendered 192,577 services to motorists.

MEN'S FASHION REVOLUTION
Big things are happening in male fashion. At any cocktail party, eavesdrop on an all-male group in one corner. Chances are they are talking about each others ties, shirts and suits or discussing the relative merits of their favorite "name designers"! and, while most gents are still patronizing their favorite barbershops, many are giving their business to hairstylists. We can assume that in many domiciles there are heated arguments about closet space - now that HIS wardrobe is getting as big as HER'S!

A man was filling out an application blank for a job and came to the question: "have you ever been arrested?" His answer was "No."

The next question intended for those who answered yes, was "Why?" Nevertheless, the applicant answered it with "never got caught."

Betcha Didn't Know... You should be glad you've passed 40, man! Women are still interested in you (zat so?), but the Army isn't.

Presence of ants on flower beds often is an indication the plants are infested with aphids.

BACK TO THE WARS: 'Restructured' Kennedy Clan Allies With Goldbergs To Fight Lindsay for National Democratic Party Control

NEW YORK—Cigarette scare or no cigarette scare you still can fill a back room with smoke and politicians. And what do you get? Here, where last hurrahs have been inflated to a dollar a dozen, you get in highly knowledgeable and cynically sophisticated circles the report that the Kennedys, led by Ted and brother-in-law Steve Smith, are battling none other than the pivotal Illinois there always is handsome Mayor John V. Chicago's Mayor Daley. If you Lindsay for control of the have him you need no governors.

This may sound provincial. Sen. Fred Harris just had to go. He couldn't raise the money. The unions were down on him. His political partnership with Hubert Humphrey did not

They knew the mayor Democratic leaders will attest to get out of the privately, is that some time back Mayor Lindsay, an up-party man, pledged to former Democratic Party National Chairman Fred Harris and a handful of other prominent Democrats that he (Lindsay) would change his enrollment from the Republican Party to the Democratic Party.

This report has it that he promised that from the moment of the party switch he would devote himself to becoming Mr. Urban America, flying from city to city, pleading the cause of the poor, the black, the minority worker and offering solutions for their hardships.

By the time the Democratic National Convention delegates squeezed through the barricades for the 1972 nominating convention, Mayor Lindsay would be a prime prospect for the presidential nomination. Polls were taken in cities across the land from New England to the Southwest - along what Lyndon Johnson once called the Boston-Austin axis. They came up fine for the mayor everytime. The Democratic Party showed up as short on charisma as it is on cash.

But the Kennedy clan had other ideas for their party. As the street people and pavement pounders love to say, they had restructured themselves. Their national headquarters soon became the Pan Am building's 30th-floor skyway suite of longhaired, good-looking Steve Smith. Mr. Smith went to town. He's tough. His political technique is that of his late father-in-law. His language with friends, as for his statement about selling wives, Frick put his hand on his eyes in mock dismay.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's handling of the postal crisis, say aides, is a quietly dramatic example of how he intends to cope with future confrontations.

He will seek to restore public order with the least possible show of strength. He will also recognize the legitimate grievances of the protesters and will take remedial action. But he won't act "with a gun at my head," he has told aides.

In dealing with the striking mailmen, the President instructed his subordinates to use "the greatest persuasion and least compulsion possible."

When he decided to send in soldiers to move the mails, he carefully specified that they should wear fatigues, not battle dress, and should go in unarmed. His plan was to use troops on the smallest possible scale in New York City. If this hasn't ended the emergency, he intended to send the military into Detroit and Chicago as the need developed.

Throughout the crisis, the President never disputed that the postal workers had caused for complaint.

"The present pay scale is not enough," he told aides flatly. "The postal service is obsolete in this respect." He also felt the pay scale should be adjusted to meet the discrepancy in living costs in different parts of the country.

"It costs more to live in some places than others," he pointed out to aides.

As long as the mailmen stayed off the job, however, Nixon insisted that "a settlement must be negotiated only when they are not in violation of the law."

WIVES AND SUBSIDIES
A group of elite farmers, called the Farmer Elected Committee, descended upon

Washington the other day looking for answers about the Nixon farm program. What they got instead from burly, bluntpoken Kenneth Frick, boss of the billion-dollar farm subsidy program, was a speech declaring:

"Some farmers would go even to the point of selling their wives for a subsidy!"

This ruffled peppery Freeman Dean, president of the Georgia committee and a farmer since he was 13. He leaped up and shouted back at the astonished Frick:

"My wife is not for sale!" The meeting broke into a hubbub as the farmers congratulated Dean for standing up to the man who controls federal outlays to them all.

What they didn't know is that Frick, if he hasn't gone so far as to sell his wife, has slyly used his 21-year-old daughter, Linda, 18-year-old daughter, Gail, and 16-year-old son, David, to collect more subsidies.

In an earlier column we revealed that the Agnew-tongued Frick had been darning subsidies at the same time that he and his close relatives had harvested more than $500,000 in crop subsidies over a two-year period.

FRICK'S FINAGLING
Now we have learned that the Frick family also has been wringing huge water subsidies out of the government. The water for their lush California farmlands come from the Arvin-Edison Irrigation District, which is financed by an interest-free, $41 million federal loan. The chairman happens to be none other than Frick's father, Forrest Frick.

Under U.S. law, the senior Frick can't provide federal water to more than 160 acres for any one farmer. But this hasn't deterred his anti-subsidies son who, to get around the law, has deeded approximately 160 acres to each of his children. In addition, his wife's parents get another 160 acres watered by the federal irrigation project.

The precious water boosts the value of the arid land from $50 to as high as $1500 an acre. Because the government charges no interest on the $41 million loan, the savings amounts to an additional, indirect subsidy of about $900 an acre.

Frick has another 500 acres which profit indirectly from the federal irrigation project. On this land, Frick has dug wells which would have to go deeper at tremendous cost if the water table should drop. The irrigation water on the adjacent land keeps Frick's well water stable under normal conditions, and he is spared the extra well-drilling costs.

Frick and his in-laws can raise greater harvests on their watered lands, of course, thus qualifying for ever more crop subsidies.

Note: Frick pays some of the cost for his federal water, but nowhere near the true value, through a complicated taxing arrangement. "He told this column that his own land is in a Bank of America trust which will revert, with all profits intact, to himself when he leaves the government. He sees nothing wrong with profiting from the federal subsidies he denounces so long as other farmers, do."

The land he put into his children's name to circumvent the 160-acre limitation is in a three-man trust made up of his brother, Howard, and two family friends. As for his statement about selling wives, Frick put his hand on his eyes in mock dismay.

"I thought," he said, "that front he knows so well. You could kid these people. Of course, it was a ridiculous October and November. Strategy called for capturing as possible between now and '72 strategy called for capturing as many governors' mansions as possible between now and '72. In Massachusetts it was to be "Kennedy" O'Donnell for governor. Hospital Secretary Hooked on Drugs....Help!

Dear Ann Landers: I do secretarial work in a large hospital. I've become addicted to drugs which I obtain through the hospital pharmacist with whom I've been having an affair. I am beginning to have severe guilt feelings. The man is married and has four small children. When I met his wife a few weeks ago I felt like killing myself.

I want to end the affair but he says if I stop seeing him he will no longer supply me with drugs. I've been on the junk for eight months and can't live without it. If I had to buy it I'd be broke. My habit runs about $30 a day.

I need some advice fast. — Hooked Hazel.

Dear Hazel: You need more than my advice, Lady. You need to see a doctor and get off the junk. It is not essential that you divulge the source of your supply. Get going before you freak out.

Dear Ann Landers: It's a good thing for me there's an Ann Landers. My parents spoiled me rotten. They let me do anything and everything. They let me go anywhere with anybody. Any kind who thinks a life like that is fun is crazy. I practically raised myself. The only advice or guidelines I ever got were from you.

You wrote something a while back that I consider a masterpiece. Please repeat it in case some parents missed it. I tore it out and here it is:

Parents do their kids no favor when they let their children run wild. Children need to have limits set. It gives them a feeling of security. I feel sorry for youngsters who can do as they please. They feel, deep down, that nobody loves them enough to insist they behave. Discipline is a special kind of love. Kids need it and they want it. — Thanks For Everything

Dear T.F.E.: You've made my day. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Frequently you advise the mistreated wife — especially the wife of an alcoholic — to "throw the bum out." It's not that easy. I was married to a drunk who stole money from my purse, sold our household appliances and got into fights — one fight cost $200 for the other fellow's new teeth. He slapped me around, being careful not to land any blows which might leave evidence of assault and battery.

I called the police on four occasions. The bum sat down quietly when the police arrived. To all the world he appeared to be a saint. Because I was wrought up they figured I was nuts. The police offered to stay while I packed to leave, but said they hadn't witnessed any violence and couldn't order a man out of his own house. The moment the police left he started to slap me around again. When I finally decided to get a divorce I was the one who moved out. So please stop telling women to "throw the bum out." The bum doesn't want to go if he doesn't want to. — The One Who Went.

Dear One: You are right, but most drunks who beat up their wives aren't as careful as your husband. They bloody noses, break jaws and blacken eyes. When the police arrive it is obvious the women didn't walk into a cupboard.

You solved the problem by moving out but most wives whose husbands become physically abusive can throw the bum out.

Do you feel ill at ease... out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Road to Milwaukee Getting Longer

Associated Press Sports Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The American League was faced with an intriguing section of its own constitution and the disquieting threat of antitrust legislation Monday as the winding judicial road from Seattle to Milwaukee suddenly seemed just a little longer.

The road the Seattle Pilots hoped to tread to Milwaukee was studded with legal rocks throughout a hearing in federal bankruptcy court. Then a boulder bounced down from the bar to stop the day's travel altogether.

And probably more important to baseball in the long run was the possible landslide started when Washington's two powerful democratic senators—Henry M. Jackson and

Warren G. Magnuson — announced they would sponsor legislation putting baseball under antitrust laws. Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., was to sponsor similar legislation in the House. The senators said the antitrust action wouldn't have any bearing on the Seattle-Milwaukee situation, "but rather could apply only against the American League in future actions."

"We'll probably introduce the legislation the first of next week, after the Easter recess," Jackson said. "I don't want to go into too much detail, but it would unequivocally put baseball under antitrust legislation."

He admitted that getting such legislation would be tough, "but I'm a realist and expected a hard fight. We've been expected of a hearing date," he added.

Bankruptcy referee Sidney C. Volinn's comment in the Seattle hearing came in his usual quiet, calm tone, but the impact seemed to change the whole mood of the proceedings.

"I must confess I'm intrigued by this section in your constitution about proceedings in bankruptcy court," Volinn told the American League attorneys.

That section of the constitution was brought up by William Dwyer, special assistant Washington state attorney general. Dwyer had held his peace throughout the day because he said he didn't want to prejudice an $82 million damage-antitrust suit that would follow a Pilot move.

But when it came time for the specific issue — to show cause why the club shouldn't be sold to the Milwaukee Brewers Baseball Club, Inc. — Dwyer sprang to life and began picking at the league constitution.

Dwyer argued in his closing statement that under baseball law the league takes over any franchise as soon as it enters a bankruptcy court. He said that being the case the club could hardly say it couldn't meet its debts because the American League wasn't in financial trouble.

Volinn then asked Dwyer if under that same constitution the league wasn't free to sell the club anyway. Dwyer said no, not if the constitution was taken as a whole and especially in the light of league promises to keep the club in Seattle for the 1970 season and underwrite its expenses.

With that, league attorneys jopped up and declared the league never committed itself to operate the club in Seattle for the season.

However, Volinn let the matter hang in the new uncertainty and recessed the hearing until Tuesday morning. He said he wanted to think about the constitutional question and added that there were other matters still to be discussed.

Those matters included the late arrival on the judicial scene of attorneys for Seattleite Fred Ruge, who wanted to make a pitch for the club. Another was something that rattled the day's proceedings.

An attorney for the Pilots radio network argued that a $212,500 contract gave Golden West Broadcasters, Inc., veto power over any move, or else the club's radio rights in Milwaukee. He added that Golden West would settle for the contract money.

Volinn had another surprise in store for the Pilots,

Milwaukee interests and the league. He exploded the news on the Pilots that as far as he was concerned there was no concrete offer from the Milwaukee Brewers Baseball Club, Inc. Elwin J. Zarwell, Milwaukee attorney, was at the hearing for the Brewers, but said he had no instructions to represent them officially.

"I'll tell you candidly," Volinn told Zarwell, attorneys and club officials, "I have read the offer and I have some questions in my mind about it. It would appear to me that if the offer is to be considered someone should be here to say what it intends so they can answer questions."

"As far as I'm concerned, as of now we have no offer before this court," Volinn added.

Jaynes Changes Mind

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—David Jaynes, Bonner Springs High School quarterback who signed with Alabama five weeks ago, reversed his field and announced today he will accept a University of Kansas football scholarship.

The widely sought 6-1, 190-pound athlete signed a Big Eight letter of intent with Kansas, the university reported, and told coach Pepper Rodgers he will sign the national letter. A national letter may not be signed before May 6.

At the time he signed with Alabama, it was understood he was not bound to that choice.

"I've had a long time to think about this and weigh my earlier decision on which school I wanted to attend," Jaynes said. "After making a choice I started to wonder was it right? The people in Bonner Springs, all my friends and the kids I went to school with were disappointed because they had hoped of seeing me play in college. "The townspeople and the students mean a lot to me. Their support and encouragement has been one of the main reasons for any success I have had. My mother and dad will see to it me play and be part of my college career-and to me this is everything."

Jaynes said Kansas "with coach Rodgers and with their new facilities - The Jayhawk Towers new housing complex where athletes will live next year and the new artificial turf on the field - is going to have a great future. They can't miss and I want to be part of it and remain a loyal Kansan."

Rodgers was elated with the signing of Jaynes, who planned to be in Lawrence this afternoon to watch Kansas' opening spring practice session. Bonner Springs schools were out for Easter vacation.

"When we first saw David Jaynes," Rodgers said, "I thought he was one of the finest prospects we've had in the state and I have seen nothing that would change my mind. I expect David to have a great career with us."

Process of Education

LINN — One young game violator can educate himself out of trouble, thanks to the sentence passed down by Magistrate Court Judge Clem C. Gove here.

The teenager was fined $50 and costs and given a four month suspended jail sentence by Judge Gove for transporting an illegal deer, but the judge said he would credit the boy with $25 for a 500 word theme on why we must have wildlife conservation.

Additionally, the youngster can earn $5 off the fine or each grade of S or better made at the end of the current school semester. And the jail sentence is suspended as long as the defendant helps his mother with housecleaning, washing and general work for four months.

Planned Parenthood

JEFFERSON CITY—Dan Dickneite is a marriage counselor for turkeys. If they follow his plan, they'll be healthy, happy and have many, many children. Dickneite is special programs biologist for the Department of Conservation and one of his special programs is supervising the stocking of turkeys. He's just wound up a highly successful year.

As the April 22-28 spring turkey season approaches, the stocking season ends. There were 190 birds trapped in the past year and then delivered to new years in 10 counties. The average release was 18 birds, six gobblers to 12 hens.

Department trappers use mostly young hens who have not established a nesting pattern in a given area. Paul Provow, area manager at the Sam A. Baker Wildlife Area, had one fine morning when he caught 22 turkeys with one shot of the cannon net used in turkey trapping.

Of that bunch, 12 were young hens. Turkeys were taken from the Sam Baker area, Caney Mountain Refuge in Ozark County, Carman Spring Wildlife Area at Willow Springs, Peck Ranch Wildlife Area near Winona, plus some portions of the Mark Twain and Clark National Forests.

The birds were stocked in Knox County near Edina, Ray County near Knoxville, Ralls County near Saverton, Vernon County near Monticello, Cooper County near Woodbridge, Stone County in two areas west of Galena and south of Reeds Springs, in Dallas and Laclede Counties (one stocking) near Lebanon, Barry County near Shall Knob, Cape Girardeau County north of Cape Girardeau and Douglas County near Ava. Prospects for the 1970 turkey season continue good, depending on the weather. If the April 22-28 period is warm and sunny, hunters should find plenty of gobblers in the woods.

There are 41 open turkey counties this season. Gobblers and bearded hens are legal from 5 A.M. to noon each day. Resident turkey permit price is $7.80. Legal weapons are shotgun and longbow.

All indications are that there was a good turkey hatch last year.

Most of this will be reflected in next season's bag, since two-year old gobblers are the bulk of the kill each season, but turkey numbers are reported very good.

Schoendienst Sees Move Runs In Face Lifting of Red Birds

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—A year ago the St. Louis Cardinals were odds-on favorites to win a third straight National League pennant and they turned out to be the biggest flop of the season, limping home fourth, 13 games behind the Mets in the NL East.

So now, after winter trades sent away outfielders Curt Flood and Vada Pinson, catcher Tim McCarver and relief hurler Joe Hoerner, Manager Red

Schoendienst is remarking the minor leagues and we might look at him as a catcher in the exhibition games."

"We looked so good down here last spring," Schoendienst said the other day. "Everything was just perfect. Bing Devine (general manager) said 'this is too good to be true.' Then when the season began everything went the other way. We just couldn't get started."

"In the run making department we outscored just two clubs and they were San Diego and Montreal, the expansion teams. We couldn't score important runs and sometimes had trouble hitting the cutoff man on outfield throws."

As a result, Red is revamping his entire outfield, has a new first baseman in Rich Allen and a new catcher in rookie Ted Simmons. But even here there is a hitch.

"Joe Torre will have to catch for a while," says Red, "because Simmons won't be out of the service until May. Joe didn't catch much last year. (He caught 11 games and played 144 at first base while driving in 101 runs).

"If Rich Allen can throw good we'll put him in left field with Joe Hague on first base. I think the hand he hurt a couple of years ago is much better than it was." Allen played all his 117 games at first base for the Phillies last year. He would have played more but he didn't show up for work every day and was suspended.

"We will also have Carl Taylor, obtained from Pittsburgh, at first base and in the outfield," adds Schoendienst. "We are switching Lou Brock from left field to right field and will have Jose Cardenal, obtained from Cleveland for Vada Pinson, in center field with Vic Davalillo. Taylor also was a catcher in the minor leagues and we might look at him as a catcher in the exhibition games."

JOE TORRE
He'll Have to Catch

Schoendienst figures he's all set in pitching with Bob Gibson, Steve Carlton and Nelly Briles as the big three. Mike Torrez, 10-4 as a rookie last year, has a good chance to become No. 4 starter.

"We think we might have two new good relief men in Tom Hilgendorf, who looked good last fall, and Sal Campisi, who pitched this winter for a team (Lacey) in the Dominican Republic managed by Billy Muffett, our pitching coach.

"When Campisi got up in the bullpen down there the fans stood up and cheered. He was that good. His earned run record was 0.57."

The Cardinals probably had the most expensive team in baseball last season. Despite having traded off Flood and McCarver, Bing Devine, who helped build the Mets, has added more speed, more home runs and more runs in getting Allen and Cardenal.

Based on 1969 averages the Red Birds gain 22 homers in view of Allen's 32 with Philadelphia. And with Cardenal's 36 stolen bases and Allen's nine they added 29 steals, more youth and 42 more runs.

"We can use the runs," says Schoendienst.

Gun thefts are on the rise. Many of the victims are gun dealers and collectors, but most are sportsmen. There's not much the honest, run of the field hunter and shooter can do about it except insure, take certain precautions and trust to luck.

It seemed that a day failed to pass during the mid-winter months that the papers weren't full of gun theft articles.

Your guns may be fully covered in your home policy under "household contents" — but don't count on it. Check with your agent to be sure. You may even want to insure them under a special rider. In any case, be sure that an exact valuation is placed on each gun, by serial number, and that you have a full list of the serial numbers of your guns on file.

What can be done to keep guns from being stolen?

Little enough — but the following steps may help: While on a hunting trip, even for the day, never leave guns or gun cases in your car or truck where they can be seen. If you stay in a motel, always take your guns in with you at night. A thief can spot a hunter's car or truck a mile away, and knows it's a treasure trove of guns, cameras, ammunition and binoculars.

If you have a gun cabinet at home, place it where it can't be seen from the outside. Better yet, keep your guns hidden. We know a hunter who keeps a full gun cabinet stocked with "loaner" guns as a decoy for burglars, and his good guns stashed elsewhere. A farmer friend keeps only his work guns at home — a couple of .22's and in old shotgun. The rest of his mustkets are kept hidden with a friend in town.

Another suggestion is that you take your guns along in the trunk of your car when leaving home for the day.

Don't keep guns where they can be seen by casual visitors in your home, and never display them to strangers. It doesn't pay to advertise, even though you are proud of each gun.

In almost each case of guns stolen from the home... it is generally public knowledge that the person owned good guns.

It only pays a dealer to advertise, not a proud owner. Some of this increase in gun thefts may be a reflection of all the publicity that guns and gun ownership have gotten recently. And as restrictive gun laws increase and tighten, we can expect a corresponding increase in the underworld traffic of hot guns.

Ol' man winter gave the are golfers a break about two weeks ago, but since has been stubborn.

With the smell of spring in the air and warm weather at hand, local and area golfers streamed to the private and public courses in big numbers but since have been restricted to indoor putting to feed their desire to roam the greens.

Many of these golfers could probably qualify for the "duffer" category because they do almost as much hacking at the golf ball as they do hitting.

I for one had big plans of trying my luck — for the first time — at the game, — and hope that the weather will break so that I can get my feet wet... but not literally.

Mississippi county track athletes from Charleston and East Prairie high school represented Southeast Missouri well in the State Class L and M indoor track and field events in Columbia over the weekend.

Wavie Reed won the hurdle events of Class L and was the only double winner on the day. He led CHS to a fourth place finish, scoring 12 points.

Henry Franklin picked up six of East Prairie's 9 1/2 points by winning the 60-yard dash as the Eagles tied for sixth in the Class M meet.

Franklin turned in a 6.4 time to equal the record set in 1962 and held by five athletes. The last time the record was equaled was in 1968 by Jim Cameron of Brentwood. The mark was set by Paul Hunt of KC Pem-Day.

East Prairie's 880-yard relay team of Robert Falkoff, Henry Franklin, Ricky Cobbs, Anise Davis, tied for second with Richmond at a time of 1:39.0, two tenths of a second off the winning time of Brookfield (1:38.8).

The only other SEMO team to place in one of the three classes was from Fennico county fourth in the high jump with a 5-8 mark and its mile relay squad placed fourth with a 3:51.7 time.

never developed. John F. Kennedy won it all on the first ballot at Los Angeles.

Then the second prize disappeared, too. Kennedy became convinced that he needed the South to win the White House. To capture Dixie he decided that he needed not Symington but Lyndon B. Johnson as his vice-presidential running mate.

This one-two punch was one of the few setbacks ever suffered by Symington, one of those favored few who appear to have been marked for success from birth. He is a member of an old, well-to-do Maryland family. He made his fortune before he was 40 years old, and a little later turned to public life.

He started in the scrappy Harry S. Truman era as a tough, effective director of half a dozen federal agencies. For the last 17 years he has been a more cautious Senator, doing what is regarded as a first-rate job for Missouri and gaining influence in the last few years in the field of military policy, on which he has long concentrated.

It is difficult to tell even now just how close he came to the vice-presidency in 1960, and, as events turned out the presidency itself, Symington will not discuss it. There are, however, persons who were close to him in 1960, as well as intimates of the late President, who are convinced that the Missouri was Kennedy's first choice for the vice-presidential nomination.

Before the nominating convention, the Post-Dispatch has learned, Kennedy himself twice sought a private agreement with the Missouri, who was then after the presidential nomination. The Massachusetts Senator wanted an understanding that he could have Symington's convention delegates if he needed them for the nomination. The Missouri camp rejected the proposal.

Kennedy on at least three occasions made it clear privately to Symington's representatives that he wanted Symington as his Vice President. The last of these assurances came in the form of a private explanation on July 14, 1960 just a few hours before he announced that Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas would be his running mate.

Kennedy told Clark M. Clifford, Symington's chief adviser, that after his own nomination the night before he still believed that Symington was his best choice. However, he went on, a group of Southerners now had urged strongly the selection of Johnson, arguing that the Southerner would carry of the Bay of Pigs crisis. After a private breakfast at the White House, Symington said, "the President asked me to come down to his office for a minute. We talked about the Bay of Pigs, and he said, 'This is rough. I wish to God you had gone into West Virginia.'"

There is a belief among some that Symington had had his eye on the White House long before 1960. When he ran for the Senate the first time, in 1952, some of his opponents charged that he was seeking only a stepping stone to higher things.

One of his friends concurs, remarking, "When he went back to Missouri I think the idea was to create a political base for himself with the expectation that when the opportune time arrived he would have Truman's backing in a try for the White House."

In this connection a relative remembers a story told by an older friend who had asked Symington when he was a young man what he intended to be. "The answer, so goes the story, 'I'm going to be President of the United States.'"

If it was only a joke, it was strangely prescient.

Except for his failure in 1960, the Senator from Missouri has sailed through life with a favoring breeze at his back. The Symington family of Maryland was well-connected, as Eastern Establishment members like to say. The children went to the right schools and knew the right people.

A year after leaving Yale without his bachelor of arts degree because of a deficiency in mathematics, young Stuart was married in a glittering Washington society wedding attended by President Calvin Coolidge. His bride, the former Evelyn Dadsworth, was from a wealthy family that was prominent socially and politically.

The example of his father-in-law, the late James W. Dadsworth, later became a powerful influence in Symington's decision to enter public service. Dadsworth, a Republican, had an outstanding career as Senator and Representative from New York.

The young couple went to Rochester, N.Y., where Symington went to work in a steel plant owned by wealthy uncles. Ambitious and hard-working, he studied mechanical and electrical engineering in night school and through correspondence courses.

Although he started at the bottom, working briefly as an ironmolder and chipper, the way was open to the top, and he moved into executive positions. With sizable loans from his uncles, he bought two businesses of his own. He was shrewd, hard-driving and talented as an organizer and executive. He quickly made successes of the businesses and then did the same for a Baltimore steel firm in an immensely profitable association. At 36 years old, he went into a brief semiretirement with a fortune already made. At the same time Mrs. Symington had emerged as a successful, $1000-a-week "society singer" in posh New York supper clubs.

In 1938 he moved to St. Louis to take over the ailing Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. Liberal labor policies, hard-nosed business skill and a contract to produce turrets for American bombers in World War II soon made it a success and brought Symington another tidy fortune, estimated at $1,000,000.

So in 1948 he was ready for new worlds to conquer when President Truman asked him to go to Washington to help in the man-moth job of turning the nation to a peacetime footing. As high-level troubleshooter, he moved swiftly. In the next six and a half years he was head of the Surplus Property Disposal Program, assistant secretary of war for air, the first Secretary of the Air Force, chairman of the National Security Resources Board and, finally, "cleanup" administrator of the scandal ridden Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He was confirmed each time by the Senate without a dissenting vote.

He was 44 years old when he came to the Capital. He was not afraid of a fight and he scored some significant victories.

As a surplus property administrator he was credited with defeating the powerful Aluminum Co. of America in a fight that opened the aluminum industry to competition for the first time. At the resources board he refused to go along with prices on tin set by an international cartel and was later credited with saving the United States $500,000,000.

By all odds the biggest, roughest fight of his career involved the military. As assistant secretary of war for air, he was assigned to monitor legislation. Agriculture and the Truman's proposal, eventually enacted in 1947, to create an independent Air Force and unify the three military services in a new Department of Defense. The Navy fought the plan bitterly. Even after it was approved by Congress, the Navy renewed the struggle in the B-36 bomber fight of 1949.

Symington hired a top investigator and mounted a furious and successful counterattack. A retired Air Force general who was in the thick of the fight gives Symington high praise, even though he is no longer a complete admirer of the Missouriian: "He got in and fought like a tiger. He fought with bare knuckles. Goddamit, he slashed... when Stu takes after you he just slaughters you."

By 1952, when he resigned from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Symington was ready and eager to run for the Senate. When the late Jacob M. Lashly and other prominent St. Louisans urged him to make the race, he jumped in. With his attractive wife and two sons joining in, he waged an energetic, well-financed campaign that won both grass-roots and organization support. He won the Democratic nomination by a 2-to-1 margin, even though his major opponent, State Attorney General J. E. (Buck) Taylor, had President Truman's endorsement. In the fall he defeated the Republican incumbent, James P. Kem, by 150,000 votes, although Dwight D. Eisenhower was carrying Missouri for the GOP by 30,000 votes. Symington's victory was the start of a political career that has made Symington the most phenomenal vote-getter in Missouri's history.

In the Senate Symington has concentrated largely on defense and foreign policy issues and committee work rather than on legislation. Agriculture and the gold drain are other major interests. One of his few significant legislative achievements was an amendment to the foreign aid law in 1967 directing the President to cut off aid to any country diverting such assistance or an excessive share of its own resources to military purposes. The provision was watered down substantially last year.

Symington has headed important Senate investigations that uncovered questionable practices in the Government's secret stockpiling of strategic materials. The inquiry led to annual savings estimated at $100,000,000 in grain storage fees paid by the Government.

Symington turned an early spotlight on the Soviet Union's growing air power. He was instrumental in instigating the Senate's investigation two years ago into the U.S. air war against North Vietnam and the current inquiry into foreign military commitments. Despite his tenure in the Senate, he has never been chairman of a full committee.

Early in his career he played a key role in the Army-McCarthy hearings. Symington clashed repeatedly with the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, once telling the Wisconsin Republican in an angry exchange that he had "better go to see a psychiatrist."

Some critics charged that Symington was ineffective in the dispute. However, in 1954 Raymond P. Brandt, then chief Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, credited Symington and another Missouri-Democrat, the late Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr., with being more outspoken against McCarthy than any other Democrat except former Senator William Benton of Connecticut.

One of the widely recognized strengths of his office is its attention to Missouri's interests. He has been highly successful in obtaining approval of such bread-and-butter projects as federal dams and buildings. His staff said that he spent almost a year of personal effort in persuading the late Senator Theodore F. Green (Dem.), Rhode Island, then head of the Senate Rules Committee, to clear the way for the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial project in St. Louis. When the Air Force was looking for a new combat plane, reportedly it was Symington who persuaded it to consider the Phantom jet made for the Navy by the McDonnell Aircraft Corp. in St. Louis.

His conduct in office has come under criticism only a few times. When he was surplus property administrator, a congressional committee denounced his recommendation that Government pipelines be sold for transmission of oil, arguing that a far greater return was possible if they were sold to gas producers. In 1958 Symington was named at a House subcommittee hearing as having interceded with the Federal Communications Commission in behalf of a St. Louis firm that obtained a license to a television channel. Symington's voting record is strongly liberal and pro-labor. In recent years a slightly more conservative trend has appeared. Americans for Constitutional Action credits him with voting the conservative position only 18 per cent of the time since that group started keeping records in 1955. However, his rating, which had never been higher than 8 per cent, jumped to 27 per cent in 1964. Since then it has mounted steadily, reaching 44 per cent in 1968.

The Missouriian has a reputation as a careful voter. Recently a freshman Senator from the Midwest got this bit of advice from an older, Eastern liberal: "If you are in doubt on an issue, vote with Symington. That's my rule of thumb."

Chosen were K. M. Streeter, rural route, Painton, chairman and Gene Dement, Sikeston, vice chairman, in charge of the meeting was James Conner, secretary of the Missouri Cotton Producers Association, Portageville.

Discussed were the new farm programs.

It was the belief of the group gathered at the meeting that the 1970 farm program, will be the deciding factor in future farm programs.

After the seven meetings CNA Prf. have been concluded, plans will be made for the annual meeting to be held in Sikeston April 18, when time resolutions and plans will be adopted for the Bootheel cotton producers.

A cotton meeting was held at Poplar Bluff yesterday afternoon. The meetings will conclude Thursday afternoon at New Madrid.

The Congressman's office announced that, during the period of Friday through Thursday, Burlison will appear at the following meetings:

At those meetings, Burlison will be discussing legislation which has been enacted or is pending before the second session of the 91st congress.

Prominent among the topics for discussion is new farm legislation which is now being written by the house agriculture committee on which Burlison serves. The present legislation expires at the end of calendar year 1970.

Representative Burlison urges the citizens of the communities who desire to discuss any problems relating to the federal government or its agencies to please contact him while he is in their county for those meetings.

Dr. Popp to Address Club

In East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE—Money is still being received for the heart machine fund, spearheaded by this county by Mrs. Howard Schneider. Mrs. Schneider reports that there is now $3,125.16 in the fund and checks are being received almost daily, but since the need is so important, she asks that all persons remember the fund when making memorial contributions or charity givings of any kind.

Dr. Carl G. Popp, chairman of a hospital committee to oversee the providing of the intensive unit for coronary patients, is very optimistic about this unit and says that "as many as half of the heart disease patients who now die can be saved" with the proper equipment; equipment that the Sikeston Hospital has not had with the exception of one portable monitoring unit that can serve only one patient at a time.

Dr. Popp will be in East Prairie April 13 where he will speak to the Woman's Improvement Club at the home of Mrs. James Bruce, Jr. His topic will, most probably, be "How to Save Your Husband".

Dr. Popp said that the only uncertainty is funds to purchase the equipment for the intensive care ward. The federal government has approved a project in which funds would be supplied to operate the unit during the first year as a pilot project. A decision is expected by the end of the month whether funds can be released for the purpose, however, Dr. Popp said that contributions from people in the area who will benefit from the project and whose lives might be saved by it, will aid in making the payments.

The intensive care unit would provide equipment to detect changes in heart beat in time for corrective measures to be taken before brain damage or death occurs during the critical early days of a heart attack.

week not to sell Israel 50 fighter planes.

"Appeasement is not the way to deal with the Arabs," Pollack said.

He said that the Jews should keep Jerusalem and charged that the Arabs had exploited the refuge problem "to embarrass Israel."

He said that the Jews had taken in Jewish refugees and asked why Israel couldn't work out an exchange of refugees with the Arab countries.

Pollack said that a quarter million Arabs have stayed in Israel since formation of the Jewish state, they have prospered and have every right of citizenship except to serve in the military.

Discussing Israel's defense needs, he explained that the country can make everything it needs except "planes and tanks."

The Rev. Pipes Jones introduced the speaker.

Joe Williams, minister of music of the First Baptist church, sang "Holy City" accompanied by Miss Jane Gwaltney at the piano.

Guests of the club were Mrs. Jake Pollack and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Pollack, all of Cape Girardeau, and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Yoffie.

Patrol Sgt. George Montgomery of Poplar Bluff will speak on highway safety at next Monday's Rotary meeting, John Southern announced.

Dr. Carl G. Popp will discuss the need for an intensive care unit for heart patients at Missouri Delta Community Hospital at a joint meeting of the Sikeston and Morley Rotary clubs here April 13, Water announced.

Panda bears are really not bears but members of the raccoon family, says The World Almanac. Natives of the Far East, pandas may weigh only a few ounces at birth but reach 200 pounds and measure over six feet when adults.

Is any part of your property

Yes, commercial establishment or medical office
No, none of the above

Funny question? Right. Useful question? Right again. The improbable things you get asked on your Census Form not only make it fun to fill out—they actually tell the government a great many useful things about your community, your family, and yourself.

The questions on housing, for example, give the government an idea of what kind of neighborhood you live in. If it turns out that you and your neighbors have substandard housing—then something can be done about it.

And that's only one reason why your form is important. It also can affect your representation in Congress, the kind of school your baby will grow up to attend, and even the kind of transportation that will serve your community in the future.

So when April 1st arrives, be sure to answer all the questions. Your Census Form is not only as confidential as your vote—it's just as important.

We can't know where we're going if we don't know where we are.

A GROWING NATION

The U.S. population has increased more than 50 times since the first census counted 3,929,214 Americans (including 697,697 slaves). The 1970 total is expected to be between 205 and 210 million. The Census Bureau's estimate at the first of the year was 204,334,344.

"VIETNAMIZATION" means transferring combat responsibility from U.S. to South Vietnamese troops. To hasten the process, special schools have been set up in South Vietnam to train the Vietnamese under guidance of American personnel. New lieutenants, top left, parade in graduation ceremonies at South Vietnam's military academy, a four-year school modeled after West Point. In Saigon, bottom photos, machine-gun training is given at the noncommissioned officers combat school while students get howitzer instruction at an artillery school. Strike of Teachers at Canalou Short Lived

March 31, 1920
A controversy between the directors of the Canalou school and four of the teachers regarding the making up of time lost during the recent epidemic of smallpox, resulted in the teachers—Mrs. and Mrs. A. D. Baughn, Mrs. R. H. Weeks and Owen Taul—calling a strike on Monday of last week. The other teachers, Mrs. W. H. Werner, refused to join. The teachers consented to accept the decision of a board of arbitration and school was resumed on Wednesday.

Steve Ramsey, aged about 68 years, died at the home of Charles Pfiffer at Matthews, last Friday, supposedly of hydrophobia. About three months ago Mr. Ramsey was bitten through the hand by a dog belonging to Albert Ayers. Alfred Deane killed the dog and no more attention was paid to the matter, people thinking that the dog was just a vicious dog. However on March 21st, Mr. Ramsey began having fits.

If You Were the Judge

Poster Protest to Vietnam War Okay

By Jack Strauss, L.L.B.
Youthful Todd disapproved of war with as much vehemence as he had disapproved of oatmeal just a few years earlier. Consequently, it was natural that he was against the Vietnam war. What's more, he wanted to do something about it. So, he decided to rent space in subways for posters attacking the United States' participation in that war. Permission, however, was refused and Todd found himself in a little battle of his own. He sued the subway authority to compel it to grant the permission he had requested.

"With our boys getting killed in the southeast," was the authority's argument, "you don't think we're going to let Todd undermine their efforts with his posters. Obviously, the only way you can get peace is by fighting for it."

"Right now," was Todd's answer, "the only things I want to fight for are my constitutional rights. Since subways are a public place, I've got as much right as anyone to rent space to advertise my point of view."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Todd to go underground with his posters? This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that so long as the posters do not present a clear and present danger to the country, the guarantee of freedom of speech under the First and Fourteenth Amendments extend to posters protesting the Vietnam war.

(Based upon a 1967 United States District Court decision)

Soil District To Compete for State Awards

Scott County Soil and Water Conservation district will compete in the 24th annual Goodyear soil conservation awards program to select the nation's top soil conservation districts, according to K. M. Streeter, Route one, Painton, district chairman.

The district's activities and accomplishments will be measured against the performance of other districts in the state in determining the first and second place winners in the annual competition sponsored by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. A committee of agricultural leaders will select the state winners.

Grand award for the first place district will be expense-paid, vacation-study trips to Arizona for the outstanding landowner-cooperator and one member of the district's governing board. They will be guests, along with representatives of the winning districts in other states, at the 10,000-acre Goodyear Farms and The Wigwam, resort hotel, in Litchfield Park, Ariz., in December of 1971.

District supervisors are Streeter, Lee Pattengill, Route two, Sikeston; Vice Chairman, Louis Watkins, Vanduser, Treasurer Franklin Schlosser, Illinois; Tom B. Stroup, Benton, secretary.

Streeter said the district's outstanding cooperator for 1970 will be selected from the more than 307 land owners enrolled in the district program. Nationally, more than 2,000,000 individuals and companies have signed cooperative agreements with the 3,000 local soil and water conservation districts.
